Orders Bombing Pause in N. Vietnam

Challenges Ho To Negotiate

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson has ordered a halt in U.S. bombing of most of North Vietnam in a sudden new bid to de-escalate the war in Southeast Asia and get peace talks started in the immediate future.

"I call upon President Ho Chi Minh, Johnson said in announcing his action Sunday night, "to respond positively, and favorably, to this new step toward peace."

He did not say how long the limited cessation of attacks would continue if Ho does not respond favorably. He did say the bombing halt, covering "almost 90 per cent" of North Vietnam's population, could be made complete if Ho now would demonstrate "restraint."

The president did not link his new peace offensive with his bombshell announcement removing himself from the presidential election race. But there was immediate Washington speculation that Ho might do so.

INTEREST IN DOUBT

The question was whether Ho—if he is interested in negotiations at all—would expect to get better peace terms from a new administration than from the outgoing president.

The president called on Britain and the Soviet Union "to do all they can to move . . . toward genuine peace in Southeast Asia." Officials said those two governments—co-chairmen of the Geneva Conferences of 1954 and 1962—could play key roles in arranging talks. They were notified shortly in advance of Johnson's announcement, and the South Vietnamese government was consulted, officials indicated.

Johnson made clear that air strikes would continue against Communist forces building up in the southern area of North Vietnam against Khe Sanh and other U.S. and allied positions in the northern border region of South Vietnam.

But he said these strikes also "could come to an early end" if North Vietnam would impose "restraint" on its operations.

The president put his proposal this way:

"Tonight, I have ordered our aircraft and our naval vessels to make no attacks on North Vietnam, except in the area north of the demilitarized zone where the continuing enemy build-up directly threatens allied forward positions and where movements of troops and supplies are clearly related to that threat."

NAMES GO-BETWEENS

Johnson then named Ambassador-at-large W. Averell Harriman to represent him, with the assistance of the U.S. ambassador in Moscow, Llewellyn Thompson, in any talks that can be arranged at Geneva, Switzerland, "or any other suitable place."

Johnson based his partial bombing halt and his peace bid announced in a speech at San Antonio, Tex., last September.

'HANOI'S DEMANDS IGNORED'

MOSCOW (Reuters) — The Soviet news agency Tass today accused President Johnson of once again ignoring Hanoi's demand by announcing only a partial halt to bombing raids over North Vietnam.

In the first reaction to Johnson's announcement Sunday night that raids would be stopped over 90 per cent of North Vietnamese territory, Tass's Washington correspondent repeated that North Vietnam's demand was for a "complete and unconditional halt to the bombing and all acts of war against the Vietnamese people."

Britain 'In Touch' With Soviet

LONDON (UPI) — Britain announced today it is consulting with the Soviet Union on possible new Vietnam peace moves in the wake of President Johnson's speech.

Britain and the Soviet Union are co-chairmen of the Geneva conference which ended the French Indochina war in 1954 and would have to act jointly to reconvene it.

British Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart announced in parliament the British government has been "in touch" with the Russians over possible new initiatives following Johnson's de-escalation of the war.

Stewart said he summoned Soviet Ambassador Mikhail Smirnovski for further talks later today on what Britain and Russia could do about the president's call to help towards peace in Southeast Asia.

Yachtsman Rounds Horn

PUNTA ARENAS, Chile (Reuters)—Lone British yachtsman Alec Rose passed this treacherous cape at the tip of South America today to add his name to the list of famous Cape Horners.

JUST NORTH OF DMZ

Red Storage Areas, Truck Convoys Hit

SAIGON (AP)—American bombers and warships halted their attacks on most of North Vietnam today, one day after strikes close to Hanoi, Haiphong and the Chinese border.

The pause in the bombing ordered by President Johnson was the 10th curtailment in the air war against the North since it began Feb. 7, 1965.

The U.S. command said American fighter-bombers confined their attacks on North Vietnam today to an area just above the demilitarized zone, hitting enemy storage complexes, truck convoys and gun positions.

Johnson said bombing would continue "in the area north of the demilitarized zone where the continuing enemy buildup directly threatens Allied forward positions and where movements of troops and supplies are clearly related to that threat."

Most of the air strikes in this area have been against truck convoys believed headed southward with war materials for the 40,000 North Vietnamese troops who are believed menacing U.S. marines at Khe Sanh, Con Thien, Gio Linh, Dong Ha and other southern allied posts just below the DMZ.

It was learned that U.S. planes also will continue reconnaissance and aerial photographic missions all over North Vietnam.

The president made no reference to the bombing of the Ho Chi Minh Trail through Laos, over which thousands of tons of war material and thousands of troops move into South Vietnam. Presumably, this air campaign will continue.

As expected ranking U.S. military and embassy officials refused to comment on the presi-

PUNTA ARENAS (AP) — The Santa Leonor, a Grace Lines passenger-cargo ship, ran aground and partly sank Sunday in the channel off Chile's southern coast. The navy said the 58 passengers and crew reached safety.

Tidal Wave Feared

TOKYO (AP) — An earthquake—described as strong—shook central and southern Japan today and the meteorological agency issued a tidal wave warning for southern coastal cities of Japan. Police said there were no immediate estimates of damage and no casualty reports. The meteorological agency said the quake shook widespread areas of Kyushu and Shikoku—two of Japan's four main islands.

HEAVY ATTACKS ON SAIGON DEPOT

SAIGON (UPI) — Communist forces launched heavy attacks today on a sprawling petroleum tank farm on Saigon's southern outskirts in their second consecutive early morning raid. The attack came after a bombing pause of North Vietnam went into effect.

U.S. officials said two huge petroleum tanks were set ablaze and a third was in danger of igniting at Nha Be, about three miles south of the city. Nha Be is the main fuel storage area for Saigon and surrounding provinces and is the site of a major port facility.

The spokesman said two outposts at the tank farm came under heavy fire. Similar attacks were made before dawn Sunday when the Communists also rocketed Long Binh, the headquarters complex for U.S. army forces in Vietnam.

HANOI VETO HINTED

TOKYO (Reuters) — North Vietnamese sources in Peking branded President Johnson's new peace overture as "out of the question" as a basis to end the Vietnam war, the Peking correspondent of the Japanese Kyodo news agency reported.

The correspondent quoted the sources as saying U.S. troops would continue military aggression in Vietnam.

The sources were reported to have described their view as "informal" but added that it is the concerted feeling of the "Vietnamese people."

Johnson's statement is "out of the question for the Vietnamese people," the report said.

PM Sees UN Role In Vietnam

OTTAWA (CP) — The U.S. decision to stop bombing North Vietnam puts it "strictly up to the Communist side to reciprocate and show their desire to end the war by negotiation rather than force," Prime Minister Pearson said today.

Mr. Pearson also said the decision announced Sunday night by U.S. President Johnson opens the way for serious consideration of the possibility of United Nations intervention in Vietnam.

"This is a time for urgent action on every front by all governments who are concerned with ending the war and beginning the negotiation of peace."

In his first public comment since President Johnson's Sunday night announcement that almost all U.S. bombing and shelling of North Vietnam had been called off, Mr. Pearson said in a statement he hopes the Communist side will respond quickly to the U.S. action.

"We must hope that, in this new situation, the friends of Hanoi, and most of all the U.S.S.R., will urge the North Vietnam government to react to the U.S. initiative so that the slaughter and destruction of this tragic conflict can be brought to an end."

PRAISES JOHNSON

Mr. Pearson said it would not be fitting for him to comment on Mr. Johnson's decision not to seek another term as president.

"His decision was made, I am sure, out of regard for the public interest as he saw it, as one would expect from one who has devoted his life to the service of his people; a service which in recent years has been given under a burden of pressures and responsibilities heavier than those borne by any other person in the world."

Stresses Need To Unite U.S.

By ARCH McKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP)—President Lyndon Johnson told the U.S. Sunday night he won't seek re-election. He called his decision "completely irrevocable."

He coupled that with an emotional warning against national "divisiveness and all its ugly consequences" and an announcement of an immediate unconditional halt to air and sea attacks against most of North Vietnam as a "first step" toward ending the Southeast Asian war.

In another speech today the president pleaded for reason and responsibility to prevail "among all the frenzy and emotion" of an election year.

The president announced, however, the sending of another 24,500 troops to Vietnam—making a maximum of 500,000 there. He has already sent 11,000 and 13,500 will be sent during the next five months.

His decision announced Sunday night to hand over to a successor, to be chosen in the Nov. 5 general election, rocked the already-turbulent political scene.

Will He Try to Pick Successor?

Left unanswered was the question whether Johnson might try to influence the choice of the Democratic party standard-bearer at the party's national convention in Chicago next August.

Also up in the air were the plans of Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey, who might join Senators Robert F. Kennedy of New York and Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota in the 1968 Democratic sweepstakes.

No president eligible to succeed himself has spurned a fight for the office since Harry S. Truman bowed out in 1952 during the controversial Korean War.

Johnson attributed his decision—which aides said was a year in the making—to controversies rending the country at this time, including the Vietnam war.

Johnson voiced his emotion-packed pronouncement in a television-radio address. Then he met with reporters in the White House and sought to dispel any suspicion that he might change his mind or succumb to a draft.

To do this, he used the phrase "completely irrevocable."

Aside from the war in Asia, whose conduct he defended strongly, recent events pointed to racial discord of record intensity this year [illegible]

Johnson also called once again for the U.S. Congress to approve a tax increase, reflecting the economic malaise influencing international speculation that the U.S. dollar eventually may be de-valued.

Polls Showed Loss of Popularity

Latest public opinion polls showed Johnson's popularity—generally and on his handling of the war—at a record low.

As the president noted Sunday night in his speech lasting 40 minutes, he had served 52 months and 10 days since succeeding the assassinated John F. Kennedy. He will leave office next Jan. 1.

"There is divisiveness in America's house now," Johnson declared in a postscript to the text of the speech handed out before delivery. "Guard against divisiveness and all its ugly consequences."

Then the Texan added:

"With our hopes and the world's hopes for peace . . . in the balance every day, I do not believe that I should devote an hour or a day of my time to any personal partisan call or to any duties other than the duties of this office, the presidency of your country.

"Accordingly, I shall not seek and I will not accept the nomination of my party for another term as your president."

The latest Gallup poll showed Johnson's public-approval rating as president at a record low of 36 per cent compared with 38 per cent last October. Another by Louis Harris showed Robert Kennedy doing better than the president against Richard Nixon, the Republican candidate.

Wall St. Sets Volume Record

NEW YORK (UPI)—Sales set an all-time record on the New York Stock Exchange today in response to President Johnson's decision to retire and to slow down the Vietnam bombing.

(See page 8.)

Volume soared beyond the 16,410,000 mark that was reached on the Black Tuesday of the Wall Street crash, Oct. 29, 1929. The milestone was passed at 3:15 p.m. (EST).

Almost all groups of stocks advanced during the hectic day of trading which saw investors jamming brokerage offices and hovering around ticker machines which at times ran 15 minutes behind.

HE'S SPENDING WHERE IT COUNTS

Men, Money, Myth All With Kennedy

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Robert F. Kennedy of New York emerged as the leading contender for the Democratic presidential nomination after President Johnson's announcement that he will not seek renomination.

The mathematics of politics ordinarily would assure Senator Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota top place among the contenders for the vacated prize.

But in the emotional year of 1968, the men, the money and the myth of Camelot are all on Kennedy's side.

McCarthy will get a satisfying boost by winning Wisconsin's presidential primary Tuesday after the president's default. But once the balloting is over, some Wisconsin leaders of the Johnson and McCarthy organizations may swing quickly to Kennedy.

The Minnesota senator is spending all that comes in on winning primaries while Kennedy's unlimited financial resources are pointed at the selection of delegates at state conventions, where the nomination is won or lost.

Few states have election laws that make it mandatory for delegates to support the candidate who wins a primary—it's the national convention that picks the candidate, and that's where friendly delegations count.

Johnson's announcement that he is "substantially reducing" the current level of hostilities in Vietnam on a unilateral basis is exactly what both McCarthy and Kennedy have called for.

Yet in reversing the hard line he has taken, Johnson stuck to the proviso that the bombing lull must be matched by "restraint in Hanoi" if there are to be peace negotiations.

DISSENTERS SHAKEN

Even in their wildest dreams, however, dissenters did not expect Johnson to say: "I shall not seek—and will not accept—the nomination of my party for another term as your president."

This was not in context with the ideas of almost every political pro. These knowledgable ones thought Johnson would never give up, never obliterate his ambition to become the president who had served longest next to Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The reaction of Richard M. Nixon, the leading candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, that Johnson "may have strengthened his hand in the party and made it possible for him to name his successor" was not shared generally by political leaders.

In their estimation, Johnson's declaration transferred him immediately from a powerful White House force into a lame duck president, one who is going out of office.

The explanation of White House Press Secretary George Christian that Johnson had in his pocket a statement of a similar won't-run announcement when he delivered his State-of-the-Union address in January, but did not use it, surprised most Democrats.

Senator Kennedy said today that, despite President Johnson's decision he does not think the Democratic party now is united behind him.

U.S. Knows Viet Need But Not Tragedy—Ky

HAMBURG (AP) — Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky of South Vietnam was quoted by Stern magazine Sunday night as saying the main American motive in Vietnam is self-interest, that his own government is useless and corrupt and that "we need a revolution."

Ky also sharply attacked Senator Robert F. Kennedy in excerpts of an interview made available by Stern, an independent magazine of political comment widely circulated in West Germany.

"The Americans are here to defend their interests, which do not always correspond with those of Vietnam," Ky was quoted as telling reporter Oriana Fallaci.

"They are here because they want to remain in Asia and to stop communism in Asia—and not because they have any particular concern about us. And they understand our need but not our tragedy."

Ky, apparently riled by Kennedy's criticisms of South Vietnamese leaders, was quoted as describing Kennedy's idea of democracy as "simply laughable, as is his concept of freedom."

"Oh, this Mr. Kennedy, who spits at us because we are corrupt and hates me when I reply: 'Yes, we are,' " Ky was quoted as saying.

Ky's reported strong statements recalled comments he made to correspondents in October, 1964, praising qualities of Hitler. At the time Ky was commander of South Vietnam's air force.

In the Stern interview, Ky said: "The elections here have been a loss of time and money. They were a joke. They have served to install a regime that has nothing in common with the people—a useless, corrupt regime.

"We need a revolution. The laws we have protect the rich. We must make new laws that will give power to the poor."

. . . JOHNSON

Candidates, politicians of all stripes and ordinary citizens appeared alike in reacting to Johnson's announcement with astonishment.

"I was surprised," said Nixon.

McCarthy echoed that sentiment but added that Johnson had made a "generous judgment" clearing the way for national reconciliation.

Humphrey, in Mexico City for a treaty-signing ceremony, said he was saddened.

"Thanks LBJ" Say Student Signs

Within half an hour after Johnson finishing speaking, small knots of young people turned out to cheer in a light drizzle in front of the White House. One group from George Washington University carried a bedsheet on which they had hastily lettered the legend, "Thanks LBJ."

Was Kennedy's entry into the Democratic primary campaign a factor?

—"It added to the general situation I talked about that existed in the country."

Would he support any Democratic ticket nominated at the party's August convention?

—"When the time comes I'll make my announcements."

Besides announcing a partial halt in bombing of North Vietnam, Johnson revealed war spending is exceeding expectations. Tentative estimates now put the additional amount for the 24 months that began last July 1 at $5,100,000,000—money Johnson will have to seek from Congress.

Johnson coupled his appeal for higher taxes with budget cuts to pare a deficit he said would otherwise be about $20,000,000,000. He said these actions are vital because "we face the sharpest financial threat in the post-war era—a threat to the American dollar's role as the keystone of international trade and finance. . . ."

Johnson told the broadcasters today he had learned in long years of government that he "no longer can pursue public tranquility as his first goal.

"For a president to buy public popularity at the sacrifice of his best judgment is too dear a price," he added. "The nation cannot afford such a price or such a leader."

Much of Johnson's speech today concerned a divided United States.

'A time of division," he said, "is a time of danger."

"There are so many more things that unite us than divide us. But somehow we Americans seem to have a faculty for emphasizing the divisions," he said.

Never Denied Seeking Consensus

"I have sometimes been called a seeker of consensus . . . I have never denied it," Johnson said.

"No leader can pursue public tranquility as his first and only goal, because for a president to buy public popularity at the sacrifice of his better judgment" would bring the country to disaster, Johnson said.

"But the real problem of informing the people is still with us," he said. "How does a leader speak the right phrase, under the right conditions . . . When discussing questions of policy so that he does not stir a thousand misinterpretations?"

"I know better than even some of my severe and indomitable critics, my shortcomings as a communicator," he said.

He said the age of electronic communication "tends to put the leader into a time capsule."

Johnson told the radio and television executives: "Broadcasting has not solved all our problems of communication. Sometimes I think it has complicated them, because television writes on the wind."

"The basic hope of a democracy is that amid all the frenzy, reason will prevail. Reason must prevail if democracy is to survive."

Mr. Pearson issued copies of his statement to reporters and then read it in front at cameramen and broadcast reporters in a small conference room on Parliament Hill.

The statement was made available in both English and French in printed form, but Mr. Pearson read it only in English.

On the possibility of UN action in Vietnam, Mr. Pearson said:

"It is also, I believe, a moment to consider seriously the possibility of UN intervention to assist in the process of peace-making and reconstruction, the beginning of which the president's statement has now made possible."

High-Level Gov't Shakeup Set in Saigon?

SAIGON (AP) — President Nguyen Van Thieu was reported Sunday to be planning a top-level overhaul of his government, including the dismissal of Premier Nguyen Van Loc and Brig.-Gen. Nguyen Ngoc Loan, the police chief who executed a Viet Cong fighter on a Saigon street during the enemy's Tet offensive.

Others said to be facing the axe are the mayor of Saigon, four or five cabinet ministers and the commander of the 3rd Military Corps area which includes Saigon.

The reports of the changes circulated widely in the capital. Government informants said high-level changes were in the works but that nothing was definite yet.

Such changes likely would strengthen Thieu's hand in running the government. There have been reports of contention between Thieu and Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky, the former air vice-marshal who was top man before last September's elections.

DIDN:T PERFOR MWELL

Informants said Loc has not performed as well as expected in the post of premier. Reports are that he will be replaced by Tran Van Huong, 67, also a civilian, who served as premier in a previous government and who ran against Thieu for the presidency in September.

Sources close to Huong said he would not reject Thieu's offer of the premiership even though he has been on the outs with the present government.

His acceptance of the premier's post would be a major political coup for Thieu—one that would please the U.S. embassy—because it would broaden the base of Thieu's civilian support.

As for Loan, rumors have circulated for months that he would be replaced as national police chief. They gained momentum after the photograph of his execution of the Viet Cong circulated around the world.

Loan is regarded as a top-notch police boss but he is closely associated with Vice-President Ky and this is said to be a liability for Thieu. Mentioned as Loan's possible successor is Tran Thanh Ben, a former police head who participated in an abortive coup against the regime of Premier Nguyen Khanh in 1964.

He said then he would stop the bombing of North Vietnam if serious peace talks would begin promptly.

North Vietnamese spokesmen denounced the formula and declared they would not promise military de-escalation. They did say about three months ago, however, that if the United States would unconditionally halt all attacks on North Vietnam, talks would begin shortly afterward and all relevant questions could be discussed.

Informants said Sunday night there was definitely no understanding with North Vietnam preceding Johnson's decision on the bombing.

The president said his immediate purpose was "to bring about a reduction in the level of violence that now exists," to save lives, and "to permit the contending forces to move closer to a political settlement."

Johnson renewed his offer, first made in early 1965, to have North Vietnam participate in a post-war program of development in Southeast Asia. He also indicated U.S. willingness to have rebel leaders in South Vietnam have a part in that country's political processes.

In a speech in Chicago today Johnson said he hopes to meet soon in the United States with President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam to "strengthen and improve our plans" for restoring peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

Johnson made this disclosure in addressing the National Association of Broadcasters—his first public appearance since dramatically bowing out of 1968 politics.

Word that he expects to be host to Thieu "sometime in the weeks ahead" was dropped into his prepared text as he spoke.

WHITE HOUSE press secretary George Christian said that President Johnson reached his final decision in the last day or two against trying for another term. Christian, in briefing reporters, said the president had been thinking of making the announcement for months and even at the end of his State of the Union address last January.

NEW YORK (AP)—A Manhattan grocer shot and killed a man he said tried to steal two cans of beer Sunday. Grocer Sam Goodwin, 55, told police the man drew a small pistol and Goodwin quickly pulled his own revolver from his pocket and fired once. Police said the dead man's gun turned out to be a toy.

"No, I wouldn't describe it in those terms," Kennedy said in response to a question at a press conference.

"Do you think the Democratic party is in a better position to capture the presidency than yesterday?" he was asked.

". . . I think the Democrats can win in November," Kennedy replied. "I think that within the Democratic party we have the discussion of these grave issues that are facing the country and we don't have that within the Republican party. And I think that's a very healthy influence on the country."

As for himself, Kennedy told the press conference in his first official comment on Johnson's withdrawal: "I will continue my campaign for the presidency of the United States."

PRAISES JOHNSON

Kennedy said that Sunday night he had dispatched a telegram to Johnson which read in part:

"Your decision regarding the presidency subordinates self to country and is truly magnanimous.

"I respectfully and earnestly request an opportunity to visit with you as soon as possible to discuss how we might work together in the interest of national unity during the coming months."

In his telegram to Johnson, Kennedy said: "I fevently hope that your new efforts for peace in Vietnam will succeed."

The president on Sunday halted all U.S. bombing in North Vietnam except for the immediate vicinity of the so-called demilitarized zone between North and South Vietnam.

Kennedy in his press conference statement said: "I am hopeful that the actions announced by the president will prove to be a step in the journey toward peace."

dent's orders.

Johnson in his speech also called for expansion of the South Vietnamese armed forces.

President Nguyen Van Thien of South Vietnam said the previous day if the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese continued their attacks, it would require the conscription of men 17 to 45 and women as well. Men between the ages of 18 and 33 now are eligible for the draft.

In addition to the bombing cut, the air force got another setback during the weekend. Qualified informants said the newest weapon in the U.S. air arsenal, the F-111A fighter-bomber, has been grounded from missions in Vietnam while an investigation is made into the loss of two of the $6,000,600 planes during their first week of combat.

Six swing-wing F-111As arrived in Thailand two weeks ago and entered combat a week later. U.S. officials said one was lost somewhere in Southwest Asia last Thursday and another crashed due to mechanical difficulties in Thailand. Saturday while en route to a combat area.

The U.S. 7th Air Force refused to comment on North Vietnam's claim that its forces shot down both planes.

In ground fighting, Viet Cong forces broke through marine and South Vietnamese defences about 15 miles southeast of Hue Sunday and blasted two key bridges on the allies' main supply highway to South Vietnam's northern frontier.

About 14 miles northeast of Hue, U.S. infantry moved in by helicopter and reported killing 30 Viet Cong soldiers.

U.S. and South Vietnamese troops reported killing 274 North Vietnamese in a series of engagements Saturday from Khe Sanh on the west to Gio Linh on the east.

On the political front, Thieu was reported planning a top-level overhaul of his government. Those reported on the way out included Premier Nguyen Van Loc and Brig.-Gen. Nguyen Ngoc Loan, the national police chief who is one of Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky's leading supporters.

HONG KONG (Reuters) — United States planes today dropped bombs and explosives on areas deep within North Vietnam, the North Vietnamese news agency reported.

The agency said the air attacks continued up to 2 p.m. local time and named the provinces bombed Monday as Than Hoa, 200 miles north of the so-called demilitarized zone, and Quang Binh.

GRIT CAMPAIGN TRAIL

Winters Asks Rollback Of Tax Hike

By the Canadian Press

With the election of Canada's new Liberal party leader and prime minister only a few days away, candidates continued to blitz the nation during the last weekend of campaigning.

Prime Minister Lester Pearson's successor will be chosen at the party's three-day Ottawa convention which opens Thursday.

Robert Winters, whose resignation as minister of trade and commerce was accepted Saturday, used his freedom from the cabinet and attacked recent federal tax increases.

In Lindsay, Ont., he said Saturday that failure to operate within a balanced budget forced the federal government to raise taxes and take drastic measures that could have been avoided.

He said his call for a balanced budget in January had been based on the fear that confidence in the Canadian economy was being threatened by continued deficit financing by the government.

HEALTHY RIVALRY

In Trois-Rivieres, Que., Justice Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau said tension and rivalry between federal and provincial governments are inevitable and healthy.

At a news conference, he said: "Confrontations between the two levels of government are not only inevitable, but positively desirable, a useful and necessary element in a healthy federal system.

"They (confrontations) were not invented by Johnson and Trudeau," he added, referring to his difference of opinion with Quebec Premier Daniel Johnson which flared up after the Feb. 5 federal-provincial constitutional conference.

Health Minister Allan MacEachen, speaking in Halifax, advocated establishment of a federal agency or department of Atlantic affairs.

He said that with such an agency, joint action by the four provincial governments and federal aid bodies could be undertaken.

He said if he were chosen prime minister one of his priorities would be the removal of the inequalities between the Atlantic region and the rest of Canada.

Mr. MacEachen gained the support of Alex Campbell Saturday when the P.E.I. premier announced that the health minister "appeals to me as having the most constructive and effective approach to the solution of Atlantic region problems."

External Affairs Minister Paul Martin told a Rimouski, Que., audience that a federal-provincial body should be set up at the ministerial level to establish fiscal policies for the country.

TAKES QUEBEC STAND

He also said Quebec should have a say in foreign policy and in matters of education and culture when Canada deals with French-speaking countries.

In Montreal, Senator Jean-Paul Deschatelets, former public works minister in the cabinet of Prime Minister Pearson, announced his support for Mr. Martin, saying that the minister was "aware of domestic as well as world problems."

Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp said in Sudbury that Canada had just passed through the worst financial storm in memory.

He referred to Canada's increased taxation in relation to the recent devaluation of the British pound, and the attack on the American dollar primarily because of the war in Vietnam.

He said the world was looking at the Canadian dollar and its value in relation to the value of the U.S. dollar.

"We had to take mild measures early," he said, "so we wouldn't have to take drastic actions later."

CBC POLL SHOWS TRUDEAU AHEAD

OTTAWA (CP) — A CBC television poll has given Justice Minister Trudeau a substantial first-ballot lead in the race to pick a new Liberal leader.

Results of the poll were broadcast Sunday night on the public affairs program The Way It Is.

Mr. Trudeau was given 606 delegate votes, less than half the simple majority of 1,239 required for victory.

There were 357 delegates uncommitted, for a delegate total of 2,476.

Commentators emphasized that the results were the delegates' feelings at the moment, and minds could change by the time they cast their ballots at the leadership convention.

It was not clear from the program whether every delegate had been polled. The result was called a "projection."

Mr. Trudeau led in five provinces: Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Quebec and Ontario. He was tied with Mr. Turner in British Columbia, each with 50 votes.

CAPE TOWN ENDING UN ROLE?

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — The pro-government Afrikaans paper Die Beeld quotes political sources in Cape Town as saying South Africa might decide to quit the United Nations before the end of April.

It listed five factors which could lead to this decision:

The new UN moves against South Africa's refusal to release Southwest African terrorists.

The expected clash with South African authorities when the UN council delegates try to enter Southwest Africa.

MANDATE OVER

S. Africa To Defy UN Again

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — UN delegates from 11 countries set out this week for a destination nobody expects them to reach—Winkhoek, Southwest Africa.

The UN Council for Southwest Africa has orders from the General Assembly to go there to try to oust South African authorities and take it over for the United Nations.

South Africa has rejected the assembly's resolution of Oct. 27, 1966, which declared the white-supremacist government's mandate over Southwest Africa teriminated.

South African Prime Minister Vorster said last week that his government would not allow the council to enter Southwest Africa.

The council went ahead with its plans anyway, and this weekend sources in a position to know said it would leave on its mission Friday.

S.A. Rebuffs UN Again

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — South Africa was reported on good authority to have turned down Saturday a third demand from the UN security council that it release Africans convicted of terrorism under South African law.

South African Ambassador Matthys I. Botha gave Secretary General U thant a letter on the subject from Foreign Minister Ellgard Muller. Thant was expected to give the council a written report on South Africa's position today.

TRAIN ROBBER Charles Wilson is expected to serve an extra four years in prison for escaping prison in Britain in 1964, a government spokesman said Saturday. Wilson, 37, was recaptured in Quebec in January. He had served one year of a 30-year sentencee when he escaped.

$40,000,000 FOR AFRICA

MONTREAL (CP)—Special envoy Lionel Chevrier said Saturday he has committed the Canadian government to foreign-aid expenditures of $30,000,000 in French-language Africa in the next three years.

Mr. Chevrier, interviewed on his return from an African tour, said the commitment extends to $40,000,000 in five years and represents a doubling of Canadian aid to the former colonies of France in Africa.

NEW COALITION DIFFICULT

Belgium Step Closer To a Split of States

By JOHN STEPHENS

BRUSSELS (Reuters) — Belgium today appeared to be one step closer to splitting into a federation of two states after Flemish and Walloon separatists made significant gains in a general election Sunday.

The older parties still retained their dominant positions in Parliament, although leading political figures said the results would make formation of a new government coalition more difficult.

Almost the only issue in the election was future relations between the country's two language groups, the 3,000,000 French-speaking Walloons in the North, and the 5,000,000 Flemish, who speak a language related to Dutch, in the south.

The election was called when the coalition government of Prime Minister Paul Vanden Boeynants collapsed Feb. 7 after eight Flemish-speaking ministers resigned in a dispute about the future of the French-speaking section of 500-year-old Louvain University.

The biggest loser Sunday was Vanden Boeynant's Social Christian (Catholic) party which was expected to lose between eight and 10 of its 77 seats in the 212-seat lower house of Parliament.

FACE DEFECTION

The Social Christians remained the biggest party in the House, but faced the threat of defection from Flemish separatist members.

The gains went to the Flemish nationalist Volksunie, which gained a probable eight seats for a total of 20, and two French nationalist parties, the Democratic Front and the Walloon Rally, which picked up seven new seats for an expected total of 12.

The Socialists—also threatened with a split by federalist elements—lost between three and five of their 64 seats.

The right-wing Liberal party, junior partner of the former government coalition, was believed to have lost between one and three of its 48 seats after campaigning strongly against federalism.

The Catholics and Liberals between them still commanded at least five more than the 112 seats needed for a majority and could theoretically form another coalition government.

But many political leaders believed the Liberals would probably prefer to go into opposition and try to force another election shortly, and another coalition would heighten the possibility of defections by separatist Social Christians.

U.K. Orders Open Courts

LONDON (CP)—Lord Parker, Britain's lord chief justice, today ordered no one is to be sentenced without the circumstances of the crime being revealed in open court.

His direction followed a wave of editorial protest last week over the way a law dealing with the reporting of court evidence prevented publication of details of a murder for which a man was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Egyptians to Vote in May On Constitutional Reform

CAIRO (AP) — President Gamal Abdel Nasser scheduled Saturday a national plebiscite on a program of constitutional reform based on a single national party—the Arab Socialist Union.

He set the plebiscite for May 2.

Nasser said that if the electorate approves his program, as expected, he will immediately start the process of electing delegates to the Socialist Union national congress, which then would write the new permanent constitution for Egypt.

His pledge of the permanent constitution appeared aimed at placating the country's youth who have been agitating on campuses for greater democracy and civic freedom.

Nasser said that after the country's territory has been liberated from its present occupation—a reference to the Israeli occupation of the Sinai Peninsula — Egypt's new constitution would be submitted to the people in a plebiscite for their approval.

If the constitution is adopted, Nasser said, then there would be elections to choose a new National Assembly and an election to choose a president under this constitution.

Unavoidable Expense

RENEWAL OF THE NORTH American Air Defence Command agreement for another five years received relatively little attention among Canadians last week. Familiarity developed over the past decade may have been a contributing factor, along with the competition of more spectacular news in current headlines. But it is equally true that a certain fatalism regarding nuclear attack has become habitual with many people nowadays, leading to lack of interest, and in addition there is divided opinion on the need for anti-bomber defences in this era of the missile.

Many Canadians, including NDP supporters, question the need and feasibility of the NORAD treaty today. They question particularly the more than $130 millions a year it costs this country, and whether such an expenditure can really buy us security in the event of an attack on this continent—and especially one across the North Pole. It is argued that the defence would prove to be primarily defence of the United States, and that Canada could become the dropping-off ground for intercepted nuclear weapons and fall-out.

These suggestions have elements of truth. But they do not answer the facts that the defence of North America is best conducted as a joint, co-operative effort of Canada and the United States; that we can have an effective voice in a continental defence only if we contribute a share to it; that passive reliance on the United States as the sole source of our air defence would inevitably compromise our sovereignty and independence in other aspects of our national life as well; and that lack of an air defence system would in no way relieve us of the risk of being bombed. On the contrary, the stronger the defensive preparation the more likely that it will act as a deterrent to attack and so reduce the likelihood that this country would become the battleground for defence of the continent.

The current years are an interim period in the development of air warfare. The intercontinental missile with nuclear warhead inevitably is superseding the bomber delivery, but defences today must be designed to cope with either type of attack. It is easy to say that anti-bomber defences are needless since an enemy would not use aircraft. But for the men in charge of the national defence, knowing that, for instance, more than 200 of Russia's bombers could reach parts of Canada with a lethal load, the decision must be to provide a defence against any weapon that may be used.

The great expense of our NORAD contribution is something we could happily do without. But it is part of the cost of living in an imperfect world and unfortunately unavoidable. Particularly it is unavoidable if we wish to retain our full right to sovereignty and a voice in world affairs which will at least reflect our position both present and potential. It is notable in any case that the agreement may be terminated with a year's notice by either party, and this should provide enough flexibility for us to take quick advantage of any new and favorable turn in international affairs.

Wrong Road in Asia

AS THE FRUIT OF A 10-YEAR study, three years of which were spent working in the Far East, a Swedish socio-economist, Dr. Gunnar Myrdal, has produced a 2,300-page volume, "Asian Drama; An Inquiry Into the Poverty of Nations." The book should interest all Western countries involved in helping the under-developed peoples of Asia. Americans generally, says Dr. Myrdal, are too optimistic about the effect and kind of aid they will be giving Asia in years to come. "What we in the West do," he says, "will be almost entirely marginal."

Marginal though it may be in his opinion, it will still be important, but it should not be viewed as decisive in directing the beneficiaries along one course or another. In an interview following publication of the study financed by Twentieth Century Fund, Dr. Myrdal calls it "stupid" to fear Communism in an Asia that is slipping backward and notes that Communism is "not an easily bred flower."

He points to two elements which threaten development in Asia: "soft" states where laws are inadequate and corruption thrives, and pious hopes of land reform where an upper class does not willingly climb down to help the lower and where the latter, exerting no pressure from below, pursues a course of "starving, apathy and more dying".

The West, he says, could give much more aid, "but it should be connected with advisers and pressures so that it would go in the right direction." He further points out that the United States too often supports reactionary governments. Dr. Myrdal seems to be saying that the Made-in-North America—or the industrialized West—designs for living, for government and for development don't fit the Asian material on which the West is trying to impose them.

The interview makes an interesting backdrop against which to read the charge of Rep. Richard Schweiker (R—Pa.) that the Pentagon has placed a "classified" blanket over another study reporting the failure of the pacification program in Vietnam.

The viewpoint expressed by Dr. Myrdal may not be new—others have said the same thing before—but the depth of his studies and the conclusions he has reached call for widespread re-thinking in Western quarters of the means by which unfortunate Asians can be helped.

Aftermath Mathematics

THE BARELY-CONCEALED rivalry between South Vietnamese President Thieu and Vice-President Ky appears to be polarizing around two new political parties which, although not openly supported by either, have been formed by their close associates. Marshal Ky was first in the field with the People's Front for National Salvation which was organized shortly after the Viet Cong Tet offensive by Senator Tran Van Don and others close to the vice-president. Last week it was Gen. Thieu's turn with two of his chief advisers, the secretary of the presidency and the president's special assistant, organizing the Free Democratic Force.

Both parties claim their objectives are to defeat Communism and build an independent and progressive Vietnam, although both refrain from spelling out any specific programs of action. Both are also notable for having named political unknowns to party offices and committees, with the sponsors content to direct operations from behind the scenes.

Given the unstable military, economic and political situation in South Vietnam which has been intensified by the Communist attack on the cities, the likelihood of another coup d'etat is high and is, indeed, a matter of open speculation by American military and civilian officials in Saigon.

The formation of rival parties by President Thieu and Vice-President Ky raises the possibility that the next governmental upheaval may be internal, with Marshal Ky attempting to seize the power that was denied him last year by the majority of generals in the military junta, and General Thieu organizing to beat him out. In the event of a coup d'etat it would be convenient, to preserve the decencies, to have ready-made political parties at hand to which the winner could turn over nominal power.

A Milestone

The Montreal Gazette

Another historic milestone in the history of Communist ideology has been passed, ranking in importance with President Tito's successful defiance of Moscow in 1948.

For the first time, a Communist head of state has been removed by public pressure. Antonin Novotny, head of the Communist Party of Czechoslovakia until last January, has been forced to resign from the figurehead post of president of the country.

Since January, when Alexander Dubcek replaced him as secretary of the national party, Novotny has seen his colleagues forced from public office, one by one, until he was quite alone. An interesting sign of the times is that the removal of Novotny was accomplished with Moscow's permission—if not with Moscow's pleasure.

The important thing in Czechoslovakia is that the liberal elements were in the government itself. And they are supported by a nation which, after 20 years of Communism, still remembers the principles of democracy.

Czechoslovakia remains a Communist state, but it is a very different Communist state. Freedom of the press has been restored and there is even talk of an opposition party.

The events in Prague will affect every country in the Communist bloc, perhaps even the Soviet Union.

Unanswered Questions on Indian Health

MR. MacEachen's statement last week on Indian and northern health services was a belated but reasonably frank admission that the minister's earlier policy was wrong. When the matter was first raised in the House of Commons on March 7, Mr. MacEachen stated that "all factors" had been considered in the budgetary decision. On Tuesday he conceded the justification of the complaint raised by opposition members (and also by Mr. Orange, Liberal member for the Northwest Territories); He had decided as a result of review "that there ought not to be any curtailment of the service now being provided.". Evidently some new factors had been discovered in the interval.

Western

Assurances

The minister of national health and welfare gave two further assurances. If it becomes apparent that, with population growth and rising costs, the current level of services cannot be at least maintained, further funds will be provided for the purpose. Secondly, any departmental directives diverging from this policy will be amended to clear up present misunderstandings.

This is welcome, so far as it goes. Mr. MacEachen offered no serious explanation of the chapter of bungling which arouses so much protest and earned him a deserved drubbing at the hands of opposition critics.

There are one or two preliminary points which should be made.

Policy Objective

The first is that it is the objective of policy to bring the Indian and Eskimo people progressively into the main stream of Canadian life. There is no dispute among the parties about this. In other words the Indians must be encouraged to claim the rights enjoyed by other Canadians and, with them, the responsibilities of other members of the community. While many are far behind in social and economic development, some have made remarkable advances, hold responsible positions and enjoy comparative affluence. There is no particular reason why the government should meet their medical costs.

An argument for government liability can be made on the basis of Treaty Number Six, with its celebrated medicine box provision. But it is apparent from the debate that most members consider this rather strained. It is doubtless a proper subject of examination by the long-planned Indian claims commission. It has not, however, been the basis of policy. It appears to have special appeal for provincial governments alarmed by suggestions from Ottawa that they should contribute a marginal percentage for the support of their own citizens.

These points being conceded, it is impossible to avoid the conclusion that the department for which Mr. MacEachen is responsible, blundered very badly.

The contention is that the revised budget will still represent an increase of $400,000 over that for 1967-68. But in fact Mr. MacEachen could not say whether this was an increase over total expenditures for that year, and did not deny the charge made on March 11, that the budget for 1967-68 was overspent by $400,000.

Priorities Important

In the light of the financial situation, there was an obligation on the government to reduce its spending. But this surely does not mean that economy should be imposed without regard to rational priorities. Why could the savings wrung out of Indian health services not have been realized by cutting back on public buildings in Ottawa or other centres?

Why, if the intent was to force or to shame the provinces into doing something for Indian residents, did the department proceed by sending out regional directives indiscriminately to Indian band chiefs? Why were the directives so worded as to arouse justifiable alarm; so worded that Mr. MacEachen himself had to repudiate some passages?

No Co-ordination

Why was there no co-ordination with Indian Affairs, the department which, in other matters, deals with the Indian and Eskimo people and requires a climate of confidence for the important consultations now going forward? Mr. Laing appears to have had his first warning of trouble when flaming arrows began dropping in Ottawa. Even with the distractions of a leadership race, in which Mr. MacEachen is a contender, this must be rated a most inadequate performance.

Finally, once the mistake had been made, why did Mr. MacEachen dally for three long weeks before making a statement to quell the storm? The government controls the business; Mr. MacEachen is himself the House leader, and usually a competent one. There was nothing to prevent his estimates from being brought forward. Alternatively a statement could have been made on motions. Or the matter might have been handled by convening the committee on Indian affairs. The explanation is certainly not lack of opportunity, although it may have been a lack of will.

Read, Mark, Learn . . .

Since you have devoted space in your columns to the currently fashionable cult of speed-reading, it may be in order to point out that in this, as in many other things, there are two sides to the coin; and that while, given sufficient practice and skill, it may be possible to flip through and eviscerate "Gone with the Wind," the Bible, or "Das Kapital" in half an hour, it is at least open to question whether this is the indicated treatment.

If extraction of maximum number of facts in minimum time is all that is involved, then speed-reading is undoubtedly the answer; but off hand, apart from looking up phone numbers in the directory, there are no circumstances that I can think of when these conditions alone apply.

To me, it is somewhat unfortunate that Theodore Roosevelt and John F. Kennedy have been posthumously harnessed to the cause of speed-reading. While I am entirely ready to believe that both could read at phenomenal speed, and had good reasons for doing so, I am personally very thankful that I do not have to follow their example.

Yours for reading, marking, learning and inwardly digesting at a speed of thirty words per minute. — John Apted, 3216 Happy Valley.

Against Red China

If one would have the time to run around and organize it, one could place an advertisement in the papers urging the Prime Minister not to recognize Red China. One could use the same points which supported the opposite, as it appeared in the papers recently with all its naivity and misconceptions.

1) To develop human understanding between Canadians and the people of China the last thing we should do is to recognize their oppressors.

2) To end our hypocrisy we could stop trading with Red China. It is bad enough that we are strengthening their position by selling them what they want without concessions, but we certainly should not follow it up by giving them diplomatic recognition.

3) The United States is quite able to establish contacts with Peking if it wishes without us playing busybody between them.

4) We can help the American public by giving example that we stand behind them in their struggle with communism.

One could go on to list many more reasons why Mr. Pearson should refuse to recognize Red China, but I am sure he knows them all. — Geza Benko, 1722 Bank.

Solve Nothing

Reading the other day the letter of "The Tired Canadian", aren't we all tired of the chaotic conditions of today? One feels so terribly sorry for the families of the U.S.A. whose sons are being sent out to battle by the thousands. War never does bring peace, but leaves in its train broken homes, the widows and fatherless children, and war will never stop Communism. It is already here, in our country, in the U.S.A. almost everywhere, and the U.S. is fighting a lost cause.

Had we, and they, as Christians practiced what has been professed and preached, Communism would never have found its way. If the U.S.A. instead of spending men and millions in war and in going to the moon in case the enemy gets there first, would create work for the masses by spending their millions in construction for the underprivileged and unemployed, black and white, and live up to their nation's motto "In God We Trust," there would be no place for Communism. — Dorothy Abraham, 1125 Faithful.

Anachronism

During the 19th century, the Magdalen Islanders fared better than their industrial counterparts, making a hardy but bountiful living from the multitude of sea and aerial life around them.

Now they are an anachronism, a heavy expense to both federal and provincial governments. Would it not be better to bring them into the modern world and reserve the islands for tourists and wild life?

Every 19th century writer speaks of the incredible plenty of wild life on the North American continent and noted the insensate slaughter going on with indifference. The slaughter of wild life for food or other purposes is not a reliable source either of food or income. —J. P. Thornton, 943 Wilmer.

Leader Definition

With the number of candidates for leadership of the Liberal party, how many can come up to the standard that great leader, Moses, laid down for co-rulers with him: "Moreover thou shalt provide out of all the people able men, such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness" (Exodus 18.21)? That is the type of man needed to lead the party today, and should be the standard set for all members of Parliament, not only for the Liberal member.—E.W.A.

Instead of Love

On Sunday (March 17) I settled down before my radio to hear a sermon by the Rev. J. D. Morris, expecting to be soothed by words of love for humanity. Instead, I was soon horrified by hearing a message that denounced the Americans for their presence in South Vietnam and for their warlike acts there, which this preacher would have us believe are as heinous as those carried out by the worst war criminals on trial at Nuremberg.

In his effort to make America's involvement in the Vietnam war illegal, to make its people out to be aggressive, bloodthirsty butchers, who drop napalm bombs so as to burn innocent little children, etc., etc., he failed to utter a single word of condemnation against the real aggressors, the Viet Cong; thereby leaving no room for doubt in the minds of Communists that what he said is true.

But for those not yet bewitched by Communist propaganda, including politicians well-up on foreign affairs, the account of the Vietnam war, as given by Mr. Morris, is false in many respects — particularly that aspect of it which branded America as the big bad boy. — Horrified.

Anti-corruption Party

I am sick to death of corruption, specifically in high political places.

There must be thousands like me, and I want to hear from them. If we are legion, we could form a new party of men and women of good will, with candidates whose principal qualification would be integrity.

From the Times, April 1, 1908:

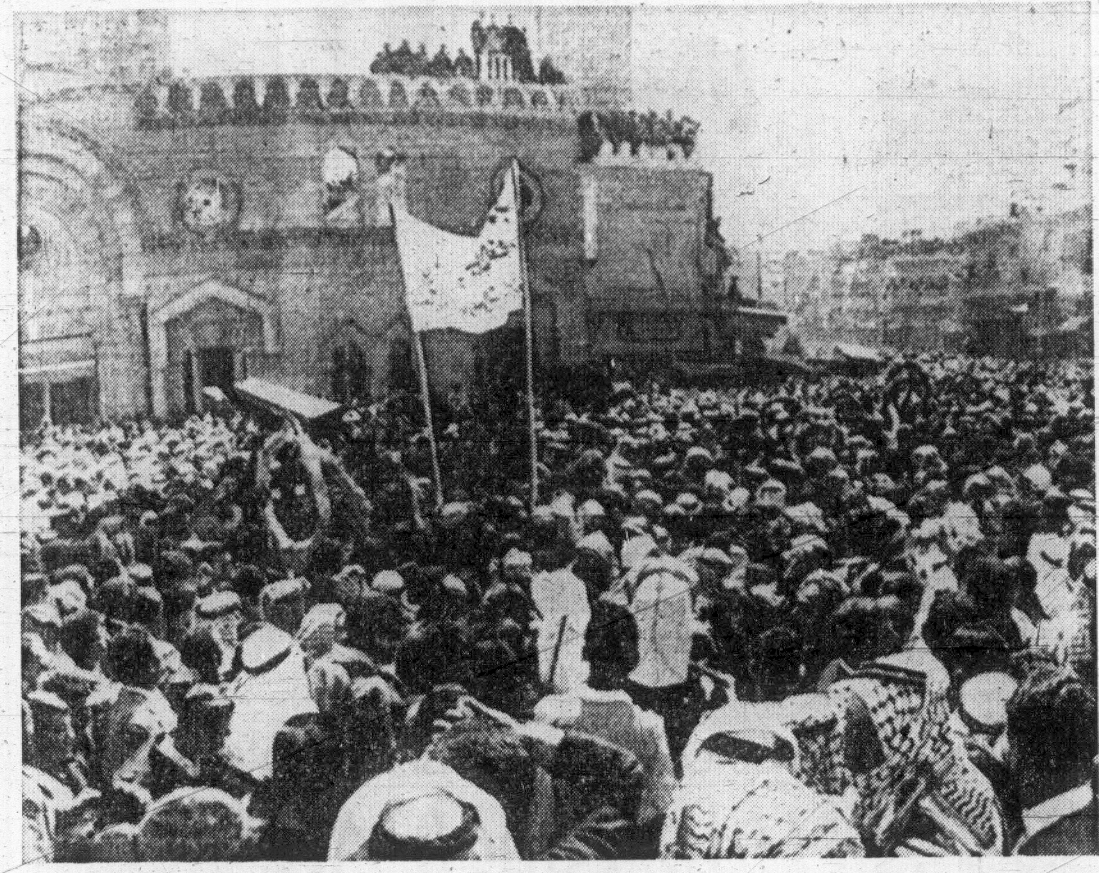
Residents of Victoria are showing deep interest in securing the contract for the new fisheries cruiser for this province. The cruiser, which has been designed by a resident of Victoria, R. L. Newman, is a credit to the Dominion service.

Residents desire to have the work all done here and a petition praying for this has been circulated.

It has been forwarded to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. L. P. Bordeur, minister of marine and fisheries and Hon. W. Templeman, and other members representing British Columbia.

Palestine Arabs Won't Give Up

By a Correspondent of the London Observer



Thousands of Jordanians gathered around the Hussein Mosque in Amman last week for funeral services for soldiers and civilians killed in the invasion of territory east of the Jordan River by Israeli forces retaliating against guerrilla raids.

AMMAN, Jordan—The initiative in the confrontation of the Arab states with Israel has now passed from the governments into the hands of the Palestinian Arab guerrilla organizations encamped on the east bank of the Jordan.

The Israeli attack in force across the Jordan on March 21 was intended as a warning to the Kingdom of Jordan to curb these "saboteurs." But there is little that the government in Amman can do.

After Israel's last "retaliation" on Feb. 15, Jordanian police tried to round up the guerrillas but failed. The only positive result was an overwhelming Jordanian vote of confidence in the guerrillas which all but toppled King Hussein's government.

Who are these men at the centre of the new hostilities in the Middle East? In Amman, it is said that "Al Fatah" (the name stands for the Arabic initial of Palestine Liberation Front) rules large stretches of the Jordan Valley. I saw the extent of this control on a recent visit to the area.

Spring is now much in evidence on the road from Amman and children by the roadside offer the traveller bunches of poppies and black iris. But spring stops at the Jordan Valley. Refugee camps are deserted. Latrines and hundreds of rows of "tent shelters" stand empty. About 71,000 refugees left the valley after the Israeli attack on Feb. 15. The rest of the women and children have found shelter in the caves, and among the men, those in military garb outnumber the fellaheen in their working clothes.

Mostly Young

Our Al Fatah contact, wearing camouflage fatigues and with a gun slung over his shoulder, met us at the appointed place, between two villages. He guided us through fields to a group of deserted mud houses where others waited for us—young men in their late teens or early twenties.

"Adel," a student of English at Ein Shams University, Cairo, who infiltrated into Jordan to join the organization, introduced us. Three of the group of seven were university students, the others had left jobs to join Al Fatah. There is no problem in getting recruits, they explained. On the contrary, they are turning away volunteers of all ages—the youngest so far was an 11-year-old boy who was sent home with "a friendly slap on the bottom."

"How is life in the valley?" I asked.

"Well, at last we feel we are living . . . now that we have these," one of the boys replied, patting his gun proudly.

"Our being here and armed is the most important and significant thing in our lives. For the first time in 20 years we feel that we have regained our identity. We are Palestinians fighting for Palestine. Even more important, perhaps, we are no longer refugees. We have vowed never to be refugees again. We hate the very word."

This group, like so many Al Fatah men, are the product of refugee camps set up after the 1948 Arab-Israeli war, in which close on one million Palestinians fled to Jordan, Syria, Lebanon and the Gaza Strip. Born or bred from early infancy in the vast overcrowded tent and shanty towns of Gaza, Jericho, and elsewhere, nurtured on charity, patriotic slogans and hopes, they have developed into rebels.

Lived on Charity

"For 20 years we have been completely dependent upon charity. For 20 years we have lived under the administration of Arab host countries, who took over our problem and promised to solve it for us, denying us the right to carry on our own struggle. They have failed and now we must depend on our own people."

What are the aims and hopes of these young men who left their families, studies, jobs to live as outlaws in the narrow, desolate Jordan Valley? Facing them is the formidable military machine of Israel which silenced the combined forces of three Arab countries in six days, last June. Behind them Jordan, which sympathizes with their cause but, embarrassed and worried about possible consequences of their activities, refuses them official support.

Many in Prison

"We know the government is against us. Many of our men are in prison. But the people and the bulk of the army are on our side."

Their aims? "To liberate Palestine. We were born in Palestine. So were our parents and their parents and parents' parents before them. We were driven out by war. The world, through the United Nations, has affirmed and reaffirmed our right to return. It has failed to secure this right by peaceful means. The only alternative left for us is to secure it by violence, since it was taken and is withheld from us by force. Our aim is simply to return to Palestine. We are willing—always were—to live with the Jews. But we want to live with them on a basis of equal rights."

"We want you to understand," Adel explained, "that we are not fighting out of hatred of the Jews. We are fighting out of love of our country. We consider ours as a human, not a political problem."

They were prepared, they said, for a very long struggle. "We tell ourselves that we are sowing the seeds that our young brothers or their childen will reap." Their main bases are in the Israeli-occupied territories, they said, but they also had bases all along the Jordan Valley. A negotiated settlement between the Arab states and Israel would not alter their plans, since it would leave the basic problem of Palestine unsolved.

"The Arab states cannot reject us," they told me. "If they do, the people will come to our support." Perhaps, with similar sentiments in mind, President Nasser said recently that no Arab leader would dare enter into negotiations with Israel.

Conflict Changed

The rapid emergence of Al Fatah—and other similar organizations like Al Assifa and the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine — has changed the complexion of the Middle East conflict. They are born out of frustration, not only with Israel, the Great powers and the United Nations, but with the Arab leaders and their own former leaders in the Palestine refugee groups.

Before the June war, the "liberation movement" was controlled by the PLO (Palestine Liberation Organization), a largely political body recognized and supported by the Arab League. It had headquarters in Cairo and East Jerusalem and a large bank balance in Beirut. Its leader was a 54-year-old lawyer, Ahmed Al Shukairy, a man with a pronounced taste for luxurious living and for making inflammatory speeches against Israel which he failed to back up with action.

Since 1948, the PLO has been prevented by the countries which played host to it—Egypt and Jordan—from launching a "war of liberation" against Israel. After the June war, Shukairy was said to have refused to order the PLO to fight and have been waiting for a resumption of open warfare in the Middle East. He made a desperate takeover bid for the young organizations like Al Fatah and, in December, was overthrown by younger elements less given to inflammatory speeches but keen on ruthless action.

Martin Too 'Successful' To Win the Leadership?

By DOUGLAS FISHER and HARRY S. CROWE

Fisher

Crowe

We're not unusual or alone in pondering about a rather striking point in relation to the campaign strength of Paul Martin.

It is the oddity that so few of his senior colleagues would like to see him become prime minister. His touted forte of experience, with its connotations of sagacity and skill, does not impress much those who should best be able to savor and judge it.

In late 1957 as the Liberals prepared to choose a successor to St. Laurent, busy Mr. Martin was unable to generate the kind of support in his party which a sober assessment of his talent said that he merited, especially in comparison to his rival and the obvious winner, Lester Pearson.

The vocal side of a politician's life then and still is the first qualification judged. Mr. Martin was much better than Mr. Pearson—on the hustings, in the House, even on television.

His political experience as a party man and parliamentarian was longer than Mr. Pearson's. His apprenticeship in the House, as parliamentary assistant and as minister of a major department, had been thorough.

Mr. Pearson did have the aura of the exotic—head of external affairs in the brief period when Canada had a pivotal, world part—and the Nobel Peace Prize was a laurel.

At the convention Mr. Martin made a much more effective speech, worked harder, glad-handed better, and ran poorly.

In his major address he struck to the core of what he and some of the rest of us seemed to sense as his greatest liability.

"I, too, have my honor," he reminded the Liberals. What did he mean?

He was responding to the word which had drifted out from the so-called power brokers—Howe, St. Laurent, McTavish, etc.—that he wasn't really an honorable person, too much the politician.

It was a pretty cruel judgment the Liberals made on Mr. Martin. Many of us, cynical about the Grits (perhaps too cynical), put it down to the capacity of a small group of insiders to arrange the succession, the delegates going along like sheep after getting "the word."

At this moment, a few days before the convention, it would seem that the convention may be more cruel than last time to Mr. Martin, not in the vote that he'll get, but in the fact that again so few MP colleagues and no ministerial colleagues of consequence will support him.

Those who know him best, at close range, over the years, ignore him and choose someone else, almost anyone else.

Indeed, the cabinet and the caucus is badly splintered on the successor, but from ministers and MPs one hears apprehension about Mr. Martin's winning.

One cabinet minister said: "It'd be the end of cabinet government and there wouldn't be many of us who'd want to stay."

Another minister said: "It's a silly thing, on the face of it, to say a fellow politician is too political but that's Paul."

A Liberal MP from his own region said: "We'd see Paul at about three caucuses a year if he became prime minister."

It's legitimate to charge that we shouldn't use such quotes without specific attribution. But after making a discount for them, even as products of our imagination (which they are not) the wonder must remain for the Martin boosters who are so much more numerous out in the country and among the delegates in the hinterland.

How does a Johnny-come-lately like Trudeau, a young gaffer like Turner, a double drop-out like Robert Winters, a finance minister whose policies have gone haywire, all rate better or as well with the elected federal politicians of the party?

Mr. Martin has held one of the most honored and least contentious portfolios for almost five years. There's no mood of deep discontent in the party with his handling of the ministry.

He was very effective during the opposition days doing his share in discrediting the Diefenbaker government, and, we repeat, his record as national health and welfare minister for 11 years was pretty solid.

Why? Why? Or, why not Paul Martin, even as a reward for a long, distinguished career? A party candidate first in 1928 and only 65 years old now! An MP for 33 years, a cabinet minister for 17, a stumping, mixing, willing campaigner through it all!

The explanation, as we make it, tells us more about Canadian politicians than it does about Paul Martin's weaknesses. He is too complete, too dedicated, too determined a politician.

It's a rare politician in this country who doesn't use that peculiar phrase "playing politics." This mirrors the rather amateurish attitude of Canadians to politics.

Some of it is a carryover from the British tradition. Some of it is a reaction against the democratic bull roar of all-out American politics.

Paul Martin is the most American of the contenders in style, thoroughness and what would be looked upon as all-round professional competence in the United States.

He's both egocentric and smoother in the open part of politics than any Liberal leader has been. Only John Diefenbaker seems comparable on these counts.

These hardly seem faults to those outside politics. We can only judge that into the secret councils of the party in cabinet and caucus, Mr. Martin has taken his thoroughness and polish. He must not let down or relax or become really confiding or approachable for the confiding. The gall and poise must never drop.

And it is all too much for his colleagues. It has to be. Otherwise we would be baffled that so many of them would take the long-shot gamble on what Pierre Elliott Trudeau might be, rather than what they know Paul Martin is.

Two Wealthy Families Control Large Part of India's Economy

By BERNARD D. NOSSITER
The Washington Post

BOMBAY — India's two great business dynasties, the polished and urbane Tatas and the rough and tumble Birlas, are waging a bitter struggle for industrial supremacy.

The Tatas, rooted in basic industries like steel, power, trucks and locomotives and chemicals, have stood unchallenged as the premier house for years. But their grasp is slipping and their own leaders acknowledge that the concern has lost the vigor and entrepeneurship qualities of its past.

The Birlas, who run an astonishing complex of 142 companies in textiles, automobiles, aluminum, jute, tea, coal and much more, are coming up rapidly. With their drive and ambition, it appears to be only a question of time before they are number one.

"We are all quite comfortable," a rich and confident young Birla confides. "For my generation, what else is left except the prestige of being first?"

A veteran Tata hand sighs: "Yes, they taunt us about their gains in sales, in profits. But you see we have our own style and couldn't live comfortably with theirs."

Strong Hold

The struggle recalls some of the epic nineteenth century contests between a Vanderbilt and a Harriman. But it is unlikely that any of the American oligarchs had as big a hold on their economy as Tatas and Birlas enjoy in India.

The 47 Tata companies boast assets of $620 million and sales of $520 million a year. They account for nearly 10 per cent of India's investment in large industry and 6 per cent of industrial production. The Birla complex is not far behind with assets of $595 million and sales a closely guarded secret.

Within the large private sector, Tata owns the largest, third and ninth largest corporations; Birla has the seventh and eighth.

The Birlas, however, appear to be riding the crest of the wave. Their assets have leaped an amazing 57 per cent in the last three years while Tatas gained only 24 per cent. Government licences determine whether or not a firm can expand here. In this crucial area, Birla won the government's assent to 83 projects; Tata, only 23.

Two Faces

The two houses represent two very different faces of India. The Tatas are Parsis, descendants of immigrants from ancient Persia who follow the teachings of Zoroaster. They are western in style and taste; their sons and daughters go to Oxford and Cambridge; they often find mates in Europe.

Beginning with the 19th century founder of the house, Jamshedji Tata, the family has had a self-conscious role about its mission. It saw itself as the leader of a modernizing India, based on the new sciences and the latest technology.

"We carry a flag here," one discerning official says, "and some of our managers are restless about it. Product standards matter and we're almost ashamed if one of the companies turns in a 12 per cent profit."

In fact, more than four fifths of all Tata group earnings are siphoned off into two networks of charitable trusts.

The Birlas are Marwaris, descendants of a notorious and enterprising money-lending caste from the Marwar region of Rajasthan. They are clannish, suspicious Hindus, vegetarians who won't touch spirits. Their sons and daughters usually go to school in India. For the first time, one Birla youth has been educated in England.

Birlas believe that the object of business is to make money and they do. Of India's ten most profitable companies, two are Birla, their rayon and aluminum concerns. Their reported after-tax profits run around 25 per cent of total investment each year.

The Tatas are probably India's first big house to loosen the family hold and seek out professional managers for their firms. Of the 18 principal directors, only three are Tatas and a fourth is a Tata by marriage; even more unusual, as many as five are not Parsi and more non-Parsi directors will come in as the seven who are over 60 retire soon.

Decisions Slow

Tata decision-making is slow and collective and the entire board must approve any new venture. To be sure, the head of the house, 62-year-old J. R. D. Tat, is more equal than others. But characteristically, he was India's first licensed pilot and spends so much time running the government's well-managed Air India line that his colleagues are distressed.

The Birlas are a clan of 11, led by three brothers in their 70s. Nobody talks of retirement and nobody would dream of giving a man outside the family any power at all.

There is a total absence of managerial method and an enormous reliance on the hunches of the clan members. A 29-year-old Birla, for example, will be given half a dozen sizable concerns to run and he may even compete with a brother or a cousin.

Family members are continually shuttling back and forth between Delhi, Bombay and Calcutta, informally consulting each other. But there are no regular board meetings for this sprawling complex.

Part of the Birla rise is due to the close attention the family has paid to politics and politicians. The son of one key Delhi minister is said to earn $40,000 a year in commissions from Birla; the nephew of another picks up a reported $30,000.

Lobbying

Birlas run comfortable homes for political figures whose decisions can determine whether a company goes forward or stagnates; Tatas keep a director in Delhi who regularly sees Prime Minister Indira Gandhi but the house turns up its nose at more elementary lobbying.

Another part of the Birla's success is due to dogged persistence. A banker to both houses says: "If they came to me with identical projects, I might be torn between the prospect of a better product by Tata and higher profits with Birla. But my guess is that Birla would get the money simply because they would keep after me until I gave in."

A third ingredient is ruthless attention to costs. "Our mills don't look as clean as some of our competitors," a Birla says, "but our stockholders are much happier than theirs."

The Birla style of cutting corners has earned it a reputation about which the house is sensitive.

A government purchasing agent says: "When I buy a Tata truck, I sleep easily. But when I place an order for Birla's Ambassador cars, my heart is in my mouth."

FINANCIAL WOES

Carnival Future Decided April 11

DUNCAN—The future of Cowichan Timber Carnival is hanging in the balance.

A meeting is scheduled for Thursday, April 11, to consider whether the carnival can continue in its present form.

The carnival was initiated in 1966 by Duncan Jaycees acting as the joint centennial celebrations committee for Duncan and North Cowichan. It was repeated last year.

Both years were successful in all respects except financially.

The logging sports attracted thousands.

But this year the carnival would have to be run without the benefit of centennial grants from senior governments.

Municipal representative at a special weekend meeting was Coun. George Whittaker.

"The organizers really want to carry on but realize the carnival could not be run on such an ambitious scale as before because of the lack of grants."

Carnival committee chairman Bob Maxwell undertook to approach local service clubs and other organizations to see if they will help run the carnival this year.

Mayor Jim Quaife of Duncan said: "The timber carnival is something this community can not afford to lose.

"It would be a sad day if we have to give up the carnival after so much work has gone into establishing it.

"I sincerely endorse any effort to keep it going."

Mayor Quaife said Cowichan Exhibition Board should give close consideration to running the carnival in conjunction with the fall fair.

The fall fair is held Labor Day weekend. In its two years of operation the carnival was run in early August.

'SO YOU WANT TO GO COMMERCIAL FISHING'

Forget $$$ . . . How Tough Are You?

The lure of a sea-going fortune has attracted many newcomers to the B.C. trolling industry—enough so that the provincial government's commercial fisheries branch has taken steps to educate fledgling trollers.

"So You Want to go Commercial Fishing" is the answer and a guide to the novice thinking of going after the elusive profits of the deep.

The three-pag article, prepared by fisheries inspector Tony Karup, lists the requirements for minimal success in trolling.

A fisherman himself before he went to work for the department of recreation and conservation, Mr. Karup knows what he is talking about when he suggests success is hard to come by.

And the financial considerations aren't the first on his list—the first requirement is a rugged constitution, the ability to take days of hard work with little or no sleep.

He stressed that it "is a very exceptional person who can stand the constant battering of the sea and having to live and work hard on a small vessel for protracted periods in offshore waters."

Following that warning comes his list of what the troller must know: seamsnship, electronics, mechanical enginering, meteorology, refrigeration and biology.

The profession is not just something for a "Sunday sailor." It's a hard way of making a living that demands training, experience and preparation, he said.

The vessel must be equipped with the latest in electronic aids and fishing gear.

The landed value in troll catch has jumped from $5.2 million a few years ago to a record $12.8 million in 1966 (the latest figures released).

This huge jump in revenues spells greater profits for someone and is explained in part by an increase in the size of the fleet.

But some of it is explained by large investments made in modern equipment.

And the profits aren't distributed as evenly as some think:

In 1964 (again, the latest figures of this breakdown to be released) only 211 trollers out of 2,855 made more than $10,000.

About 50 per cent of those had profits of less than $1,000, Mr. Karup said. But this latter figure is also made up of "day" fisherman—people who hold a shore job and fish on their off hours.

He warned the quick-buck frateruity a properly-outifitted boat costs from $35,000 to $40,000.

Many of the trollers—a tightly knit group who don't like a crowded field of competitors — echo Mr. Karup's thoughts. Modern aids have become essential—automatic pilots, direction-finders, radar set, Loran sets (long-range air navigation equipment adapted for marine use) and "Mickey Mouse" sets which enable them to talk to nearby vessels.

Gerald Clark, 21-year-old owner of the Walhoo, at Shoal Harbor near Sidney, is a strong exponent of these aids.

He has vivid memories of his first season working at top speed for 18 hours at a stretch, too exhausted to eat more than cold leftovers before falling into his bunk for a few hours.

That winter, the Walioo was fitted with an automatic pilot.

His vessel, rigged with six lines, six hooks to a line, demands hard work and concentration when the fish are running. When he sails with the fleet at season opening April 15, he may be one of the fortunate few who make the job pay. Or, with Mr. Karup's warning in mind, he may be one of the many who are lucky to pay their expenses.

It all depends on the skill, experience and equipment he has, and, of course, if the fish are running.

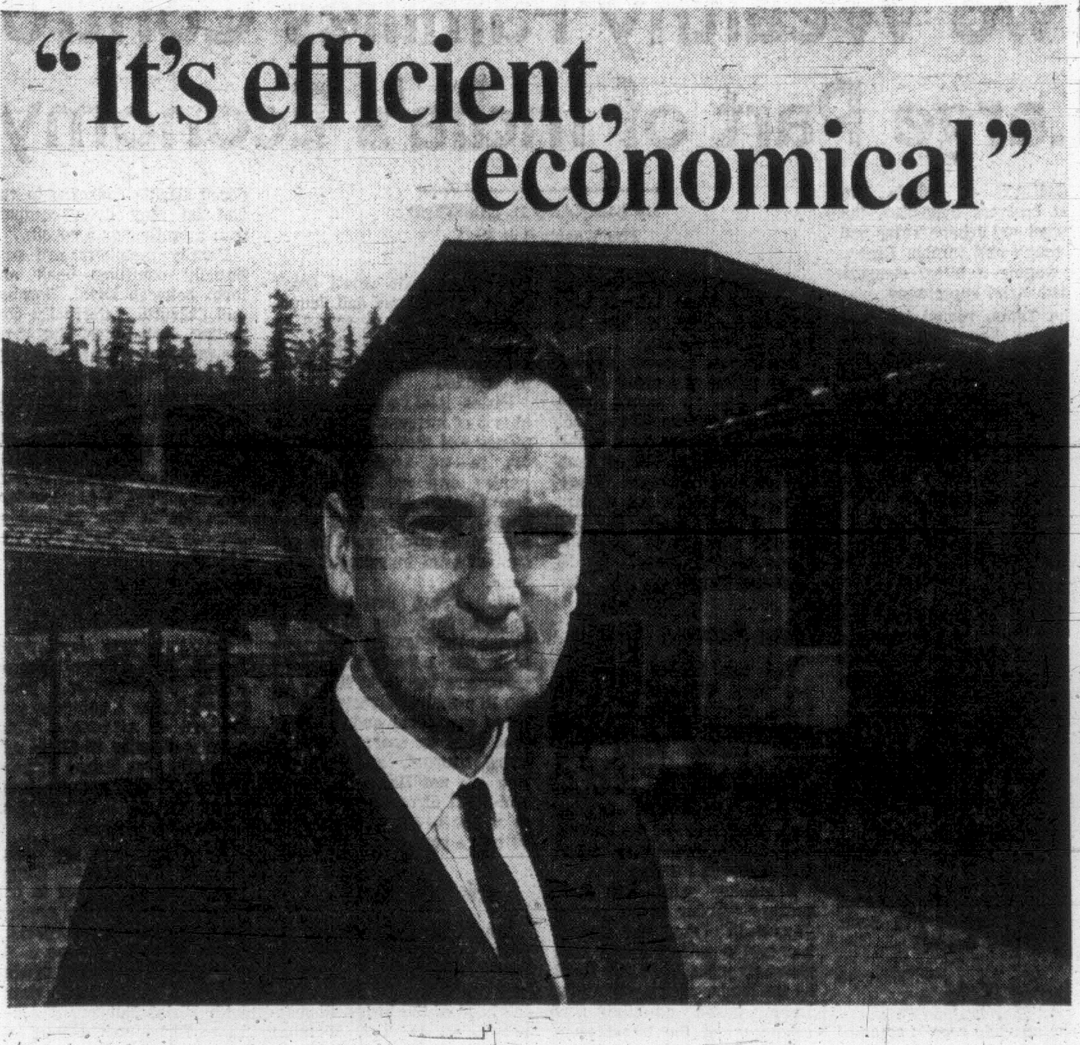
We asked Mr. E. R. Hewson of Gold River what he likes best about Electric Heating:



"It's efficient, economical"

"I expected I'd have to pay a bit more for electric heat. Not so. It's fully competitive with the oil heat I had in my previous home. It's much cleaner, and hasn't required any maintenance at all".

The people who have electric heating say it's economical.

14,000 homeowners have made electric heat B.C.'s hottest seller!

STEADY WIND

Reality Sets Pace In Final Race

By SHIRLEY HEWETT

Jack Simth's eight-metre Reality set the pace for 15 cruising boats Sunday in the windup race for the Sidney Winter Series. For a change, the weatherman came up with some of the best racing conditions of the year, with steady 17-knot winds and no sea.

Reality, in a repeat performance of her first two races last fall, crossed first over the line and also won on corrected time.

Skipper Smith had an able crew in Chris and Nick Lott, Mike Davis and Norrie Spencer.

Apart from the front-running metre boat, there was plenty of excitement at the finish line.

A. B. Sanderson's Filey Brig, which was leading the rest of the fleet, tacked 100 yards from the line to avoid a beacon. During this manoeuvre she was passed by Frank Bush's Concubine, which crossed second, and Theo De La Mare's Tandem II, which crossed third. These three boats finished within seconds of one another.

Bert Buchanan's Maria II won the Cal 20 shortened course class race, which is run simultaneously with the handicap boats.

CORRECTED TIME RESULTS: (1) Reality, Jack Smith. (2) Shih-Yen, Fred Gardiner. (3) Doxy II, Peter Coombs. (4) Tandem II, Theo De La Mare. (5) Filey Brig, A. B. Sanderson. (6) T'Solo, Roy Denny (7) Encore, Walter Stenner. (8) Hammerhead, Peter Young. (9) Concubine, Frank Bush. (10) Galenaia, George Dufour. (11) Viking, Jack Korning.

CAL 20 Class Racing: (1) Maria II, Bert Buchanan. (2) Skua, Rosemary Bullen. (3) Miranda, Dr. Norman Bailey. (4) Semiramis, Neville Life.

Scouts Planning First Co-Ed Camp

Girl Guides and Boy Scouts of the Juan de Fuca district are arranging their first co-ed camp.

Robert Muir, assistant district commissioner, said recently Venture Scouts and Rangers between 14 and 18 will set up a camp on Forbidden Plateau this summer.

He said 16 girls and 16 boys will be picked for the trip.

"We've been swamped with leaders for this camp," he said.

"So many people want to go we could make up the numbers without taking the young people."

The Juan de Fuca district scouts—three time winners at the competitive camp, will be there again this year. A troop from View Royal will also enter the annual competition, which is judged on the basis of planning and adherence to previously-filled schedules.

Eight Scouts will be entering the competition for the Armory Adventure Award, a national hiking competition.

Women Released

SAIGON (Reuters) — Two American women, captured by North Vietnamese troops when they occupied the former imperial city of Hue, were handed back to U.S. troops today, an American embassy spokesman said. The women were identified as Dr. Marjorie Nelson, 29, of Kokomo, Ind., and Sandra Johnson, 26, of Clio, Mich.

NEW CENTRE STUDIED FOR SENIOR CITIZENS

Construction of a senior citizens' centre at Esquimalt is under consideration.

"There is a need for it," said recreation director Harold Moist, "but in view of the cost we would have to build a hall which could be used by the entire community."

Mr. Moist said an exploratory meeting has been held to discuss the need of Esquimalt senior citizens who now meet in Jubilee Hall on Fraser St.

Representatives from the Lions Club, Golden Age Club, Silver Threads and the women's auxiliaries to service clubs attended the meeting.

'ASSAULT ON SENSES'

Good Turnout Digs Underground Films

By PAUL MUSGROVE

It was like the Roman catacombs all over again.

In an eerie darkness, broken only by a single green light and those over the coffee urn and exit, the faithful gathered to worship their latest diety—underground films.

Every social class had its representative, from middle-aged businessmen looking embarrassed to the hippies looking as if they were born there.

FIRST HERE

The occasion was the first Victoria public showing of underground films. More than 120 persons attended, nearly filling the Ninth in the Fifth Piace at 1313 Government.

Paul Curtiss, Canadian National Film Board representative in Victoria, said "the films are called 'underground films' simply because they are not distributed through regular channels.

"Many would not get by the censors, but as many more would. It's just that they (the films) have no mass appeal.

"They cater to a small minority—artistic people."

The films themselves prove to be an assault on the senses as blinding color images change in split instants and the soundtrack rocks the eardrums.

TOO MANY

There are six films on the program—about five too many for one sitting, and they are presented with almost no break between, save for one after the third.

The program begins with Red Path 25, a study of a young woman's sensuality.

Following it is easily the best film of the evening, Portrait of Lydia. It is an animated film of a young art student's mind, using intensely sexual images and symbols which, as the image of "father" explodes out of them, turn to parodies of famous paintings.

Next is Hyacinth's Child, an "experimental film of fantastic imagination." If you haven't a fantastic imagination the chances are you won't be with it.

NOTHING

Nothing Happened This Morning is next, and nothing happens.

The fifth film is an experience. Called Relativity, it consists of a montage of man and his environment, ranging from scenes of beauty to cruelly ugly shots. The camera comes in for a close shot of a swine being butchered, then casually runs along a naked female form.

Last is Craven Sluck. Even the written program doesn't comment on this one.

On the whole, the films appeal to creative people with quick imagination and an ability to grasp the obscure.

The program is being presented again tonight at 8:30.

Stores 'Bombed'

NEW YORK (AP) — Fire bombs were thrown in three of Manhattan's best known department stores Saturday—Macy's, Bloomingdale's and Klein's.

There also were fires at Gimbel's and at an annex to Klein's. The Gimbel's fire was described as suspicious. All the fires occurred during a two-hour period in the afternoon.

Yarrows Jobs Decline By 100 During March

A company official said the hourly-rated payroll one month ago was 425. Today it is 325.

He described this as "the lowest for a few years now."

"It's terrible," said Ernest Orchin, business agent for the Machinists, Engine Fitters and Helpers, Local 3.

His union has only 15 men working at Yarrows and 75 unemployed.

"There is nothing in sight," he said. "It doesn't look good, that's for sure. This is the lowest we've been at Yarrows for years."

Unemployment has been rising since last fall when the federal government's austerity program postponed or cancelled all work scheduled for the west coast and Victoria Machinery Depot shipyard shut down Jan. 1.

RECRUITERS

Employment recruiters from National Steel and Shipbuilding Company of San Diego signed about 25 persons in Victoria last week and moved on to Vancouver, looking for platers, welders, sheet metal workers and burners.

The Bethlehem Steel Company of Baltimore began recruiting in Vancouver today for platers, welders, electricians, pipefitters, sheet metal workers and outside machinists. The company will be in Victoria Thursday and Friday.

BRIDGE RESULTS

Winners in the weekly duplicate bridge game conducted by the Victoria unit of the American Contract Bridge Club are: Margaret and Jack McAvoy; Marianne Powell and Ronald Smith; Jo Waddington and Al Kallberg; Jean Walpole and Sadie MacPherson; Laura Tingley and Freda Small.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP) — Prices in late trading at the Winnipeg Grain Exchange showed little reaction today to President Johnson's announcement that he would de-escalate the Vietnam war and not seek re-election.

Oilseed exports showed some activity. Japan took 800 tons of flaxseed and 1,100 tons of rapeseed. Some buying from other sources, however, failed to move prices up.

Deliveries of rye are expected to expand with announcement by the Canadian Wheat Board of open delivery quotas for rye.

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain and soybean futures prices declined on the board of trade today under general liquidation that sent wheat prices down more than 1½ cents.

There appeared to be a lack of sustained buying activity. Trade was mixed and volume was slightly above the recent pace.

Liquidation was strong at the opening, and wheat prices quickly moved 1 cent lower. In later dealings prices dipped to 1⅝ cents lower but there was a small surge of buying near the close.

Hedge selling on the opening weakened corn prices to a level from which they never recovered.

Oats and rye prices generally fluctuated with corn and wheat and trade was light.

Gold Sale Quiet

LONDON (AP) — London's gold market, the largest in the world, reopened quietly to two-day private dealings today after its 17-day closure to halt last month's panic gold rush.

The Bank of England was supplying no gold in line with the two-tier market agreed on in Washington March 17 to withhold monetary gold from the grasp of speculators and hoarders.

Central banks will exchange monetary gold among themselves privately under the new system at the fixed price of $35 U.S. an ounce.

The price in the free market was fixed at this morning's opening at $38 an ounce, a bit less than Friday's price in the Paris and Zurich markets.

The price ranged in early trading from $37.50 to $38 an ounce.

When the London market closed March 15, markets in Paris, Zurich and elsewhere remained open. To the surprise of some authorities and the shock of some gold hoarders, the price of gold rose less than $10 and then fell back. Some had been gambling it would double under panic demand.

The suspension of gold trading in Canada continues at the request of the federal government.

Ottawa followed the London action March 15 by asking banks and gold dealers to stop trading until the situation in gold markets was clarified.

Since then refiners, dealers and banks have been permitted to act as agents or brokers for Canadians in arranging sale of their gold holdings in foreign markets.

The government has also permitted gold to be sold in Canada for industrial use if the sales are reported to the finance department.

NY Sets Volume Record

Wall Street closed today with a big gain and piled up the greatest volume in history, topping the 39-year record 16,410,000 shares made on the "black Tuesday" of Oct. 18, 1929.

Turnover topped 17,000,000 shares minutes before the close.

Stocks closed at their highs of the day after recovering from some selling around mid-session after a new report via Japanese sources that North Vietnam was cool to President Johnson's peace move.

The Dow Jones average was up 20.69.

Stocks roared ahead at the start in a record-breaking 6,000,000-share first hour as the Street responded to President Johnson's surprise announcement on the bombing pause and his decision not to accept renomination.

The report on North Vietnamese coolness to the peace move accompanied a drastic cut in the best gains, but this was gradually won back. In the half hour prices surged ahead and volume increased.

Blue chips and glamor stocks spurted on a broad front.

AT VANCOUVER trading was heavy and prices up this morning in reaction to President Johnson's decision to desclate the Vietnam war.

By 11 a.m. more than 900,000 shares had changed hands. Leading trader was National Nickel, up '13 to $1.60 from its close Friday on 107,600 shares.

Captain International added '37 to $5.62.

In oil action, Central Del Rio climbed '50 to 14.50.

AT TORONTO the stock market snapped out of a monthslong slide today as stock prices bounced up in a wave of investor enthusiasm about improving peace prospects in Vietnam.

"This is what we all have been waiting for," one analyst commented on the rally in the wake of President Johnson's announcement he will not seek reelection and that he has ordered a cutback in the bombing of North Vietnam.

AT MONTREAL prices shot up in early afternoon trading today.

Industrials paced the advance as CPR climbed 2¼ to 51¼ R. L. Crain two points to 44½ and Maclaren A 1½ to 14. Simpsons and Velcro jumped 14 each to 33 and 45¾.

AT LONDON developments in the United States and at the Group of 10 meeting in Stockholm resulted in an active stock market today. In irregular industrials the leaders were mostly lower.

International stocks were generally firmer. British funds and gold shares reacted strongly to the Stockholm agreement on special drawing rights, gilt-edged advancing to record gains of over ½ point in places, while gold shares fell sharply with losses as high as 20 skillings.

Hotels Seek Access To Federal Money

Hotel men meeting here today said the federal government should stop discriminating against their industry when it comes to borrowing funds for capital expansion.

Directors of the B.C. Hotels Association and the Hotel Association of Canada in semi-annual meeting at the Empress Hotel, expressed alarm at current tight-money conditions.

Chairman James Vernon, of Vancouver, said hotel men want access to Central Mortgage and Housing, National Housing Act and the Industrial Development Bank Act, from which they have been excluded historically.

"We should at least have the opportunity to apply for loans, but so far we've been refused completely," Mr. Vernon said.

POOR RELATION

"The government has been treating us like a poor relation."

He noted that while there is no specific exclusion of hotels in provisions for financing new construction under these authorities, the practice reveals that "roadblocks have been set up to preclude the industry from obtaining money normally available at reasonable interest rates to other industries.

"There has been a pronounced hesitancy on the part of the usual commercial lenders to loan funds for expansion or improvements on the security of the hotel alone.

"Exorbitant interest rates (10-12 per cent) in addition to substantial discounts (or bonuses) have become normal practice in such financing over only a short term," Mr. Vernon said.

He said it is impossible to predict accurately over the next 10-15 years what new construction there will be, and that the tourist industry—which the government is anxious to encourage—is left vulnerable.

In B.C., he said, tourism is the third industry and fast approaching second place. "We need the accommodation to meet this increase and would welcome support from the provincial government in this request."

Reserves Rebound From Dip

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's exchange reserves declined by $245,600,000 in March, Finance Minister Sharp announced in a statement today.

The statement said pressure against the Canadian dollar resulted in a drain of reserves until the middle of March.

"Since then," it added, "the reserves have risen steadily."

The fund's holdings of United States dollars and gold stood at $2,244,400,000 on March 31, down from $2,490,000,000 on Feb. 29.

A finance department spokesman said the unusual step of explaining the reserves change was taken because Mr. Sharp did not want the figures misunderstood.

DOLLAR RECOVERS

The Canadian dollar has come back strongly in exchange markets during the last 10 days. The exchange rate in New York has come within a few basis points of its parity of 92.5 cents in terms of the U.S. dollar.

The statement said three developments in March contributed to "the change in trend of Canada's reserves."

"One of these was the approval by Parliament of the government tax measures.

"Another was the new arrangement with the United States which exempts Canada from the U.S. balance of payments measures affecting capital flows.

"The third was the easing of strains in international financial markets following the decisions announced by the governors of the central banks contributing to the gold pool."

RESULTED IN LOSSES

Sales of U.S. dollars from the reserves to maintain the exchange rate close to its pegged value resulted in losses of $350,000,000 in January and $113,400,000 in February.

Today's statement indicated another substantial drain early in March.

The exemption from the U.S. balance of payments program was announced March 6 by Mr. Sharp. Misunderstandings about the program's effect on U.S. subsidiaries operating in Canada have been blamed for most of the reserves loss in January.

Defeat of the government's original tax bill Feb. 19 had been another blow to confidence. A successor providing for tax revenues of $390,000,000 to virtually balance the 1968-69 federal budget was passed by the Commons March 15.

By this time the international monetary system was under attack by gold speculators, whose buying stampede forced closure of the London gold market March 14.

CREATED NEW SYSTEM

Members of the pool supplying gold to the market met in Washington March 16 and 17 and decided to set up a two-price system for gold, maintain the official price of $35 an ounce only for transactions among monetary authorities.

The price of gold on the open market was left to find its own level.

When Canada pegged its dollar in 1962 it agreed to maintain its value within one per cent of 92.5 cents in terms of U.S. funds. This represents a trading range between 91.575 cents and 93.425 cents.

When the dollar is under pressure its value is likely to slip below the minimum unless it is supported officially by the exchange fund.

Ship Losses Blamed On Ottawa Whims

Special to The Times

VANCOUVER — The federal government's shipbuilding policy has been called "discriminatory and wrong" by a shipyard executive here.

J. W. Hudson, executive vice-president of Burrard Dry Dock Company Limited and a past president of the Canadian Shipbuilding and Ship Repairing Association, spoke Friday to the Navy League of Canada.

He noted the government has failed to provide a long-range policy of development and that policy has changed with cabinet whims.

The shifts and changes since the Second World War were outlined by Mr. Hudson.

In 1947, the Canadian Maritime Commission was set up to encourage the growth of the Canadian merchant marine but it presided over the demise of the post-war fleet of 170 freighters. Its functions were fragmented into other government departments and it was abolished last year.

In 0949 the government passed a construction assistance act which permitted some write-off of costs. This was repealed last year.

BUILD SHIPS

In 1961 the government offered a 40 per cent subsidy to encourage Canadian owners to build ships in Canada. The legislation was suspended in 1965 and reinstated last year at 25 per cent.

Until 1965, the government asked for shipbuilding bids on a regional basis so yards in the east and west would have equal opportunities.

This policy was changed to open competition which has worked great hardship on B.C. shipyards and means that in future nearly all government contracts will go to eastern shipyards.

"It has been a history of a few slow steps forward, and one quick step back," he said.

"The main concern of the industry is for survival with the outlook for the future uncertain."

He criticized delays and design changes on construction of 20 destroyer-escorts. He called it "a maze of bureaucratic red tape and confusion."

LONG DELAYS

Because of long delays shipyards were often unfairly accused of inefficiency when the fault lay with the government.

Although government shipbuilding is at an all-time low, the staff of government experts administering shipbuilding is at an all-time high.

He called this "a perfect example of the working of Parkinson's Law."

New Rate Takes Effect

OTTAWA (CP) — The maximum rate of government-insured mortgage loans under the National Housing Act increases today to 9⅛ per cent from the rate of 8⅝ per cent in force since Jan. 1.

Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. announced the change Friday in a notice to private lending institutions.

The notice said CHMC would make its direct loans to home buyers at 8¾ per cent.

Both rates are effective during April, May and June.

The maximum represents what life insurance companies and other lenders may charge individuals for loans whose risk is insured by the federal government.

Cabinets Prefer Sales Taxes

By DENNIS ORCHARD

OTTAWA (CP) — Hitting hard with increases in sales and special taxes, the provinces will drum up fresh revenues of at least $350,000,000 this year to meet pressing bills.

Nine provincial budgets are in, with Manitoba to come. Only Quebec had decided to nick the taxpayer right in the pay cheque with a surtax on personal income tax.

The handy retail sales tax, increased last year in three provinces and introduced in a fourth, is a repeat favorite.

This year Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick and Saskatchewan are broadening the bases of their sales taxes—making them apply to more items—and Newfoundland and Saskatchewan are increasing theirs by one percentage point.

ALBERTA HOLDS OUT

Alberta has held out another year as the only province without a general sales tax, but the government is predicting "one of more substantial new forms of taxation" in 1969.

The fashion for 1968 has clearly been established as the gasoline tax, which is being bumped higher in seven provinces.

Newfoundland has increased its tax to 25 cents a gallon from 20, Prince Edward Island to 21 from 18, New Brunswick's goes to 19 from 18, Quebec's to 19 from 16, Ontario's to 18 from 15 and Alberta's to 15 from 12.

Tobacco taxes have been jacked up in Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, Quebec, Ontario and Saskatchewan. Newfoundland and Quebec followed the late 1968 increase of federal liquor and beer taxes with increases of their own last week.

Quebec has doubled its corporate capital tax in one of the rare levies directed squarely at businesses.

ANOTHER TAX INCREASE

Still to come are details of another tax increase on industry promised by Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia. His budget held the line on all standard taxes, but indicated that certain fees from mining and logging companies would be increased later.

The tax increase of about $350,000,000 are in several cases combined with severe belt-tightening to permit the provinces to pay their fast-rising education, health and welfare bills.

COLUMBUS RESCUED

This is play that made goalie Peter Ahrend hero of Columbus Carls during combined Pacific Coast Soccer League match and Province Cup game Sunday at Macdonald Park. Ahrend makes diving save on penalty shot by Victoria's Jim Menzies to salvage 1-1 tie in league game for Vancouver club, which went on to win 2-1 cup decision in overtime. (Times photo by Irving Strickland).

League String Safe But Cup Hopes Gone

By DOUG PEDEN

Victoria O'Keefes had an interesting Sunday.

They were six inches away from clinching at least a tie for first place in the Pacific Coast Soccer League race and the same distance from a semifinal berth in the Province Cup playoffs.

As things turned out, the Victorians were stopped one point away from the front-running UBC Thunderbirds as they held Columbus Carls to a 1-1 draw but were bounced out of the cup chase as they lost a 2-1 decision to the Vancouver club.

On the other hand, Carls lost their last chance to finish on top but remained in the running in the cup scramble for the B.C. championship.

All this happened in one match at Macdonald Park and in case that sounds confusing, this is the way things worked out:

O'Keefes and Columbus were slated to play a league game Sunday and due to tangle in a Province Cup quarter-final at a later date. Since postponed matches had created scheduling difficulties it was decided to play the cup quarterfinal in conjunction with the league argument.

At the end of regulation time, the clubs were deadlocked 1-1 and since no overtime is played in league matches, that is the score that went down in Coast League books.

However, a decision was required in the cup struggle so the teams resumed hostilities for 30 minutes of overtime.

Peter Claimed He Wasn't Guessing

All the agony of overtime semed likely to be avoided by O'Keefes when the clubs were deadlocked at 1-1 with six minutes remaining in regulation ttime.

The hard Columbus tackling that had punished O'Keefes throughout the match, finally caught up with the Carls wen Bob Hazeldine sent Victoria's Ike MacKay crashing to the turf near the Vancouver goal and Hazeldine knew referee Tom Smart would be pointing to the penalty spot before he regained his feet.

Jim Menzies was elected to take the penalty kick. He got away a fair shot but tall Columbus goalie Peter Ahren made a fine diving save and Columbus was rescued from defeat.

"It wasn't a bad shot," Menzies said later, "but he's a tall man and I got it too close to him. Another six inches to the right and it would have been in."

Menzies and his mates believed Ahrend must have guessed which side the ball would come in order to move so quickly, but the goalie said he waited for the shot.

"I waited until he hit it," Ahrend said, "but I was lucky. "You have to be lucky to save a penalty."

O'Keefes Reversed Usual Pattern

While running their undefeated league string to 10 matches, O'Keefes reversed their usual pattern before their largest crowd of the season—1,008 fans.

Usually a strong second-half club, coach Frank Grealy's men were sharp and dangerous as they dominated the opening half but appeared to tire in the second session. In the overtime period they were unable to keep up with the jubilant Carls.

Peter Brett got the goal that gave Victoria a 1-0 lead at the intermission after Peter Wilson, Ike MacKay and Jim Menzies had moved the ball into position. Ahrend tried to boot the ball clear, but it bounded into the net off Brett's shins at 10 minutes.

Joe Bragnola got the equalizer for Carlings early in the second half, hooking the ball over his shoulder into an open net after Victoria goalie Barry Sadler had rushed out to push the ball away in tight goalmouth traffic.

O'Keefes finish their schedule against Burnaby at Vancouver Saturday. They need a win to finish ahead of the Thunderbirds and a draw to tie them. Columbus is apparently doomed to a third-place finish with Firefighters fourth after New Westminster was nipped 2-1 Saturday by North Shore.

Sandra Collects On Ace

BOYNTON BEACH, Fla. (CP) — Sandra Post of Oakville, Ont., didn't win the $12,500 Palm Beach open Sunday, but she did prove an ace in the hole can be nearly as lucrative as first prize.

Canada's first women pro golfer, Miss Post finished the 54-hole tournament with a 229 total, 14 strokes back of Mickey Wright.

Miss Wright's share for finishing first was $1,875 and Miss Post got $347. But then there was the ace in the hole.

Miss Post picked up $1,000 in special prize money Saturday when she blasted a three-wood shot 180 yards against the wind and into the cup on the 11th green for a hole-in-one. She became the ninth woman professional to pick up the prize money since its inception in 1965.

The ace helped her to a second-round 76 to go with her opening 79 and third-round 74.

Miss Wright had a 71-71-73 while Ruth Jessen and Carol Mann shared second-place money with 219 totals.

Uvic Oarsmen Place Second

VANCOUVER— University of Victoria's eight-oared junior varsity crew raced to a second-place finish in a five-team invitational regatta here at the weekend.

Victoria's crew finished in a time of 6:25, five seconds behind UBC's winning shell. Pacific Lutheran finished third.

PERFECT PENALTY SCORE GETS LUCKIES IN SEMIS

VANCOUVER (CP)—North Shore Luckies defeated Firefighters 7-6 Sunday to move into the semi-finals of the British Columbia soccer playoff for the Province Cup.

The teams tied 1-1 after regulation time and a 30-minute overtime session. To break the tie, officials allowed each team three penalty kicks. With the score 4-4, three more kicks were allowed.

Mike Robinson of North Shore scored on all six shots. Greg Arnett of Firefighters had one shot blocked by goalie Gerry Macey and scored five times.

WHL Semifinals Go Wednesday

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The four playoff clubs took turns winning on home ice during the weekend as the Western Hockey League ended its regular season.

San Diego Gulls bumped Phoenix Roadrunners 6-2 before 11,259 fans Sunday and Phoenix edged San Diego 3-2 before 9,358 Roadrunner fans Saturday.

Portland Buckaroos edged Seattle Totems 3-2 Sunday before 8,722 fans to get revenge for 2-1 defeat before 12,085 fans in Seattle Saturday night.

The games had little effect on the standings. All five teams in the WHL were locked into position before the final weekend began.

Vancouver Canucks, idle during the weekend, finished fifth and missed the playoffs.

First-place Portland will meet third-place San Diego in one best-of-seven semi-final and second-place Seattle takes on fourth place Phoenix in the other. First games are Wednesday, in Portland and Seattle.

RONSON FIRES 45TH

Goal-scoring champion Len Ronson fired his 44th and 45th of the season Sunday to pace the San Diego win. Gord Sinclair, Warren Hynes, Al Nicholson and Alex Faulkner got the other markers.

Tom McVie and Morris Stefaniw replied for Phoenix.

Lou Jankowski broke a 2-2 tie for Phoenix Saturday night with a game-winning goal at 14:32 of the third period. Del Topoll and Dick Lamoureux got earlier goals.

Ronson and Lynn Wilkie scored for San Diego.

Norm Johnson's goal at 1:23 of the third period broke a 2-2 for Portland Sunday. Andy Hebenton and Connie Madigan also scored for the league champions.

Chuck Holmes and Bill Dineen got the Seattle markers.

Marc Boileau's goal mid-way through the third period broke a 1-1 tie for Seattle Saturday night and gave the Totems the victory. Gary Kilpatrick also scored for Seattle.

Johnson replied for Portland.

Ski Honors Distributed

GREEN MOUNTAIN — Ski honors were well-distributed Sunday in the annual Crown Zellerback Races at Green Mountain.

Forbidden Plateau skiers Peter Gibson, Ron Nixon and Perry Colwell were runnersup in three of the four events. No runnerup was declared in the women's race.

Bouncy Bouncers Prove Beneficial

Mikita Wins Point Title; Giacomin Has 250 Reasons

(Times News Services)

The bounce shots that drive goaltenders to distraction gave one (1) netminder and one (1) forward reason to smile as the National Hockey League drew the curtains on the 1967-68 regular-season campaign.

The forward was Stan Mikita of Chicago Black Hawks, who captured his fourth scoring title in five years but enjoyed greater personal delight in recording a pair of firsts.

The bounce that benefitted a goalkeeper was a 90-foot goal scored by New York Rangers' Camille Henry. The goal clinched second-half netminding honors for New York's Ed Giacomin.

Giacomin counted off the final seconds of the regular season along with the 17,250 fans who had packed Madison Square Garden to watch the Rangers defeat Montreal Canadiens 4-2.

"Six . . . five . . . four . . . three . . . two . . . one," the fans chanted, and when the final buzzer sounded Giacomin tossed his stick away triumphantly, leaped high into the air and was mobbed by his teammates

IT WAS PLEASANT

Why the exuberance over a meaningless game which couldn't alter New York's second-place windup in the NHL's Eastern Division?

"I had a pretty good reason," laughed Giacomin in the happy Ranger dressing room later. "About 250 of them."

What Giacomin meant was that beating the Canadiens by two goals gave the Rangers the second half Vezina Trophy for fewest goals allowed by a team. The award carries a $250 bonus for the goalie.

Going into the final regular game, Giacomin and backup goalie Don Simmons had allowed 77 goals over the second half of the season while Gump Worsley and Rogatien Vachon, Montreal's goalies, had given up 76.

The margin was still intact for the Montreal pair with New York and the Canadiens tied at 2-2 after two periods of Sunday's game.

Then Phil Goyette's 25th goal of the year on a perfectly executed combination play with linemates Donnie Marshall and Bob Nevin, put the Rangers in front 3-2 and got Giacomin square with the Canadien goalies.

CLINCHES VICTORY

They didn't stay even for long. Camille Henry lofted a 90-foot shot that skipped past Vachon for the Rangers' insurance goal and Giacomin's clincher.

"I'll bet that's the first goal Henry's ever scored that he didn't see," kidded Emile Francis, the general manager-coach who piloted the Rangers to their highest finish in 10 seasons.

Henry, a close-up specialist who scores most of his goals from in front of the net, agreed.

"I never saw it go in. I was heading for the bench when I heard the crowd yell."

The crowd, 22nd sellout of the season and 17th in a row for the Rangers, kept right on yelling.

MIKITA GOT ONE

For the first time in his brilliant career Mikita reached the 40-goal plateau and "that's the first time in nine years of trying I got one of them goals."

The goal Mikita was referring to was one which players loft in the air and have it bounce past the goalie and into the nets. That's the way he got No. 40 past Roger Crozier to tie Detroit Red Wings 5-5.

"I've been trying it for years but never seemed to get one," said Mikita. "I thought more about it after seeing Henry get his on television against Montreal"

SWAYS MOMENTUM

Although Mikita had clinched the scoring title with a pair of earlier assits, his 40th goal kept the Hawks from having to carry a burdensome six-game losing streak into the Stanley Cup playoffs against New York starting Thursday.

Mikita went into the season finale with a one-point lead over Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins and a three-point lead over Gordie Howe of Detroit.

"It was getting a little shaky," said Mikita. "I was a little afraid of Esposito, who was playing at home, and no cushion is big enough against Howe."

Howe, celebrating his 40th birthday, had to be content with one assist and the greatest scorer in NHL history was truly disappointed in not getting goal No. 40.

"I certainly tried and I had my chances," said Howe. "But it seems I just stopped skating the last three games. I had a lot of ice time. It's been that way for nine games. Remember, I'm no Bobby Hull. Anyway, Mikita won it in glory. He didn't back in."

START THURSDAY

Playoff Stakes Are Lucrative

By the Canadian Press

Now the money goes on the line in the National Hockey League.

The preliminaries were completed with the finish of the 74-game schedule Sunday night and Thursday the Stanley Cup playoffs start on four fronts.

First and third and second and fourth-place teams in each of the Eastern and Western divisions of the expanded league meet in best-of-seven quarter-finals with the winners advancing to divisional playoffs.

Then a best-of-seven inter-divisional ployoff for the Cup, taken last year by Toronto Maple Leafs, starts in the home of the Eastern champion.

Montreal Canadiens in the East and Philadelphia Flyers in the West coasted through their final league games, having earlier clinched their divisional championships with each man getting $2,250.

GET $1,000 LESS

Second place New York Rangers and Los Angeles Kings each picked up $1,250 a man while Boston Bruins in the East and St. Louis Blues in the West earned $750 a man for finishing third.

The fourth-place Chicago Black Hawks and Minnesota North Stars earned $250 a player.

But that's pretty slim pickings compared to what each player on the Stanley Cup champions can pick up in the next six weeks with a total of $7,500 a man up for grabs—$2,250 for winning each of the quarter-finals and semi-finals and $3,000 for taking the final.

FOUR GAMES SET

In the quarter-finals Thursday it will be Boston at Montreal, Chicago at New York, St. Louis at Philadelphia and Minnesota at Los Angeles.

The St. Louis placing came on a weekend surge that saw them down Minnesota twice—3-2 Saturday and 5-3 Sunday—to take third place in the West by a single point.

The Canadiens also lost twice, 2-1 to Boston Saturday and 4-2 to New York Sunday—as did Philadelphia which dropped a 2-0 decision to Pittsburgh Penguins Saturday before being clipped 5-1 in Pittsburgh Sunday.

The Rangers won two, beating Detroit Red Wings 3-1 Saturday and Montreal, while Toronto won 3-0 over Chicago Saturday and 4-1 over Boston Sunday.

A pair of ties also featured weekend action with Los Angeles and Oakland Seals each scoring two goals and Detroit and Chicago getting five each Sunday.

JIM LACKIE

VETERAN CITY SPORTS OFFICIAL . . . JIM LACKIE DIES IN HOSPITAL

He Was Fighter for His Teams

A familiar figure for 42 years on the Victoria sporting scene, James "Jim" Lackie died Saturday night in Royal Jubilee Hospital.

He was 75 and he had been ill for two months but although he had made a gradual withdrawal in recent years, he is recalled as a driving force in city softball, soccer, basketball and hockey.

Lackie came to Canada from Scotland in 1910, settling first in Winnipeg and moving to Victoria in 1926. A former soccer player, he found a new interest in softball, managing a girls' team in 1934 and in 1935 took over men's teams.

In 1936 he organized a longshoremen's tug-of-war team which took city, island and B.C. championships. After World War II he helped organize a commercial league hockey at Memorial Arena and later became an ardent member of Victoria Curling Club—a sport he followed until his final illness.

Lackie was a life member of B.C. Softball Association and he was a director of Victoria United soccer team in the Pacific Coast Soccer League during the '50s.

He managed the Esquimalt Meat Market softball team, the first Victoria club to win the Western Canada Senior Men's championship in 1947. He also managed the B.C. champion Senior A Douglas Tire softball team. Old-timers say he was a fighter for all his teams.

Lackie, who was also attracted to the quieter sport of fishing, was manager of Canadian Stevedoring Company's Vancouver Island division when retired in 1963.

He is survived by his wife Amelia and a daughter Edna, (Mrs. Clifford Robbins), four granddaughters and two great-great-granddaughters.

Funeral will be held at McCall's chapel, Tuesday at 4:30 p.m., followed by cremation.

MIR HAS CHANCE

Slalom Win Not Enough To Sew It Up

ROSSLAND (CP)—Nancy Greene's last ski race in Canada is over, her international career almost ended and she spoke for more than herself Sunday when she said "it will be very sad."

She heads for California Tuesday and the last ski meet of the season, at Heavenly Valley, next weekend, where the 24-year-old star has her last chance to sew up her second skiing World Cup for women.

Her fast victory in the women's giant slalom here Sunday wasn't quite enough: Isabelle Mir of France has an outside chance to tie her.

Miss Greene, the Olympic star from Rossland, said she hadn't changed her mind about retirement. After Heavenly Valley, she will return to university, travel to Europe and consider commercial offers.

Her performance closed the first four-day meet in Canada sanctioned for World Cup points. A fall Friday robbed her of meet honors. Fernande Bochatay of Switzerland and Jean-Pierre Augert of France took those.

HAS STRANGLEHOLD

Miss Greene has 186 points in cup standings. Miss Mir, 19, has 150 and Florence Steurer of France, 144. When Miss Greene won the title last year, she had 176 points.

In the other final event Sunday, Herbert Huber of Austria came from behind to win the men's giant slalom. Reinhard Tritscher, a team-mate, was second and Guy Perillat of France third.

In earlier events, Jean-Claude Killy of France took his second World Cup by winning the slalom. He also plans to retire. Marielle Goitschel of France won the women's slalom Thursday.

World Cup scorers have announced Miss Greene had won the 1968 cup, but after several checks of figures confirmed that a tie in the race is possible.

To do it, Miss Mir must win both slalom and giant slalom races at Heavenly Valley, and rival coaches doubt she can.

In men's events on 5,820-foot Red Mountain, Killy brought his cup total to 200, 25 fewer than his perfect 1967 count. Dumeng Giovanolia of Switzerland has 119 and Hergard Nenning of Austria 102.

Miss Greene displayed perfect relaxed control Sunday as she zipped down a 5,200-foot course in 1:26.85. Miss Steurer conquered the 47 gates in 1:28.41 and Gertrud Gabl of Austria in 1:29.41.

"It's sure nice to do this at home," said Miss Greene. The hometown crowd showed its approval, screaming "Go Tiger, go" as she raced, mobbing her when she left the hard, icy course.

Wests Blank Kickers

Victoria West scored a 2-0 win over Hourigan's Kickers during the half-hour overtime period with Ranjit Dillon and Peter Robarts scoring the winning goals.

London Boxing Club, the second-division champion, nipped first-division Luckies 2-1 in the first game of a best-of-three promotion-relegation series on goals by Ron Armstrong and Rick Allen. George Robbins scored for Luckies.

In second-division Dodds Cup semifinal action, University Norsemen clipped Colony Inn 2-1. Bill Kennedy and Dave Fuller connected for the winners while Bruno Flora scored for Colony.

Taylor Posts Fastest Time

Bill Taylor rammed his Shelby GT-350 through the mile road circuit at Western Speedway to clock the fastest time in the Victoria Motor Sports Club's meet Sunday.

Jacklin Gives England Drought-Ending Victory

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Not since Ted Ray took the U.S. Open in 1920 had an English golfer won a major American tournament.

Then along came Tony Jacklin, a golfer with ice water in his veins—the kind that wins and wins and becomes great.

At the age of 23, Jacklin is a winner with every promise of joining the ranks of the great—which he thinks of as Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus, Gary Player and Ben Hogan, but with no idea of patterning himself after any one of them.

He said he was nervous, but he never showed it as he faced down Palmer in the final round of the greater Jacksonville Open Sunday. He admitted he utilized "Arnie's army" as his own battery-charger to a 15-under-par 273 and the $20,000 first money.

PAGA FIRST

It was the first time a golfer from England had ever won on the Professional Golfers Association tour.

Even before Jacklin hit the jackpot, Player was calling him potentially the greatest English golfer since Henry Cotton and the man nost likely to be his country's No. 1 sports hero.

Jacklin, second in the Pensacola Open the previous week, stumbled slightly after going over par Sunday on the 14th and 15th. But he recovered to thwart any challenges to the title.

276—Bob Charles, Arnold Palmer, Gary Player, $3,100.

Royals Edge Soccer Birds

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Royals of the North American Soccer League defeated University of British Columbia Thunderbirds 2-1 on a free kick in the last minute of an exhibition soccer match Saturday.

Kirk Apostilidas broke the half-time 1-1 deadlock. Janos Hanek created the tie for the Royals after Ken Elmer of UBC opened the scoring early in the first half.

Luck of the Draw Could Be an Omen

Carroll Drawn Into Final Berth; Wakeham Captures Medal Honors

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Laurie Carroll and Bill Wakeham had a few things in common before starting out Sunday in quest of the Vancouver Island Open match-play golf championship. Victoria-reared and professionals, each has won The Daily Times Trophy on two occasions.

But there was no similarity at the finish of the qualifying round at tough-playing Colwood.

The 27-year-old Wakeham was the mark of steadiness and captured medal honors with a two-over-par 72.

Carroll, the Golflands' driving range teacher, struggled in with an embarassing 81.

Both will start on equal footing at Uplands next Sunday when the match-play aspect of the tournament gets under way.

For that, Carroll has to thank the luck of the draw.

Golfers who scored 80 or better numbered 29. That meant only three of 13 swingers who scored 81 would be drawn in to complete the championship flight of 32.

No. 30 was Greg Candlish, a redhead who recently moved to Victoria from Vancouver and now plays out of Cedar Hill.

No. 31 was Gordie Hay, a Glen Meadows veteran.

The last card turned up Carroll's number.

IT HAPPENED BEFORE

"I'm glad something good happened to me today," joked Carroll later.

The "good thing" also could be an omen. The last time a Laurie was blessed with a "draw-in", he turned around and won it all. That was Laurie Kerr, the Colwood amateur who picked off the Times Trophy in 1956 after he drew in.

But Carroll wasn't the only one who had troubles Sunday. Only 21 in the starting field of 159 broke 80. The problems were, seemingly, as varied as the tales of woe. Some were affected by a stiff, all-day breeze and many pinned their downfall on putting. Most agreed the course played extremely long off the back tees.

MCCOLL MISSES

The major qualifying-round casualty was Bill McColl, the 1955 titleholder from Victoria Golf Club. He was one of the unfortunate 10 drawn out of the 81 group.

The others were assistant professionals Mel Carlow of Gorge Vale and Oak Bay's Jay Wilson; Ken Nott, a well-regarded Uplands junior; Brian Lindsay, George Moon, Reg Hoadley, Joe Evans, John Furmston and John Carlow.

Net scores of 77 or better qualified safely in the handicap division argument for The Hugh Francis Trophy, and four of 15 who scored 78 were drawn in.

In addition to Wakeham and Carroll, other former winners qualifying for the championship were Vaughan Trapp, last year's winner from Oak Bay, and Norm Boden, the Cowichan club professional.

Trapp made it easily with a 76 while Boden, also steady, came in with a 73 and actually had the best chance to grab medal honors from Wakeham's grasp.

Boden three-putted the 16th for a bogey, then repeated on the 18th, missing a four-footer that would have given the Cowichan pro a tie.

Wakeham had a pair of 36s against Colwood's 35-35-70 figures. Boden, 38-35, bogeyed the first three holes but stayed with par figures the rest of the way.

MACLEOD MAKES IT

Others qualifying were Ricky Kent, Fred Ranson, and the Ron Howards (father and son), Trapp, Carroll, Mike Buckley, Dr. George Bigelow, Cec Ferguson, Gordie Whan, Lex Sutcliffe, George Murphy, Roger Bishop, Bill Court, Dave Mick, Wayne McDonald, Alan MacLeod (last year's finalist), Mike Gray, Arne Brown, Ted Langlois, F. C. Pettit, Carl Schwantje, Rick Bath, Art Carey, Brian Stott, Bob Hunt, Hay and Candlish.

Bruce's Blasts, Sharon's Skill Make It Great Night for Canada

Bruce Rollick had his greatest night and Sharon Whittaker gave the odds another beating at the Racquet Club Saturday night to put more Canadian than usual in the Canadian open badminton championships.

SHARON WHITTAKER

BRUCE ROLLICK

The thunder-hitting Rollick staged a courageous comeback and a fantastic finish to become the first Canadian to win the men's open singles crown since the tournament was placed under the sanction of the International Badminton Association 12 years ago.

Miss Whittaker, who won her second national closed singles crown Thursday, made it a double by capturing the women's open final.

Then the former Victorian, who is working for a masters degree at the University of B.C., made it a perfect evening by stepping out with Vancouver partner Mimi Nilsson and winning the women's doubles final to give Vancouver players three of the five open titles at stake.

Because of her studies, Miss Whittaker drastically trimmed her tournament schedule this season and had played singles in only two tournaments before the Canadian meet started. Since a steady diet of tough competition is usually imperative for success in national events, many experts figured Sharon was bucking formidable odds in her bids for the dominion crowns.

"I decided this year that school was foremost," Sharon said. "I needed time to study and had to pick and choose my tournament appearances. I had a slow start this season but later managed to get quite a lot of practice and when I came here I was just hoping it would be enough."

From the time she stepped on the Racquet Club courts Tuesday there seemed little doubt that it had been enough. She was the dominant distaff singles player in the closed portion of the tourney as she regained the title by defeating another ex-Victorian, defending-champion Alison Daysmith, in the final.

Whittaker, Nilsson Gain Revenge

Then the only question seemed to be whether or not she could continue to master Tyna Barinaga, the tiny Phoenix swatter who beat Sharon in the Canadian meet three years ago but lost to Miss Whittaker in the semifinals of the U.S. nationals during the past two years.

The question was answered emphatically in Saturday's open final when Miss Whittaker turned loose too much shot-making skill and too much hitting power for the second-ranked United States player and defeated Miss Barinaga 11-5, 11-8.

Miss Whittaker and Mrs. Nilsson then gained revenge for their loss to Montreal's Pat Moody and Jean Miller in the women's closed doubles by tripping the easterners 17-14, 12-15, 15-8 as they ran 10 successive points in the final game.

However, there was little doubt the night belonged to Rollick, noted for his thunderous shots but not always accurate.

The 23-year-old Vancouverite had indicated Friday night that he might be the man to beat when he trimmed Japanese ace Takeshi Miyanaga and he was even more impressive when he ousted Thailand singles champion Sangob Rattanasorn in Saturday's semifinals.

Against the great Thailander, Channarong Ratana-Saeng-Suen in Saturday night's final, Bruce got away to a shaky start and then won it all with a plucky comeback battle that had fans alternately in despair and elation.

It was all elation when Rollick scored the third point of the second successive extra-point game and fans gave the weary Vancouverite a standing ovation after a match that produced just about the ultimate in shuttle excitement.

There was little indication of the final outcome when Rollick was subdued 15-2 in the first game by the clever, 28-year-old Channarong.

Bruce Survived Three Match Points

Channerong continued his blistering pace by running up a 5-0 lead in the second game. Then Bruce started connecting with his mighty slams and went ahead 11-7 and 13-11 before the slender Thailander came back to tie it.

Rollick chose a set of five points, which he won 5-2 for an 18-15 victory.

That seemed about as far as Rollick could go when Channarong was out in front through the final game and had match point against Rollick three times before the Canadian clawed his way to a 14-14 tie.

The whip-like Channarong selected a set of three points and despite some desparate defending by the Thai master, Rollick refused to yield another point and took a 17-14 decision.

"I still don't believe it," grinned the happy Rollick. "It's the greatest thrill I've ever had. I was distressed in the first game when I thought it was going to turn into a rout."

Channarong, who had expressed his respect of Rollick's talent the previous night, was generous with praise for blasting Bruce and added: "He earned it."

Weary from his singles exertion, Channarong partnered Miss Barinaga in the mixed doubles final and went down 15-11, 15-7 before Sangob and Lois Alston of Los Angeles.

Sangob also shared the men's doubles crown, teaming with Cavalert Chumkum of Thailand to down the Vancouver pair of Wayne Macdonnell and Rolf Paterson 15-12, 15-11.

Join the cool (and smart) 10,000 who'll get air conditioning at no extra cost with the '68 Ambassador.

We estimate that 10,000 Canadians will buy our Ambassador this year. The cool 10,000 who'll be getting themselves into the most comfortable full-size car we've every built.

The big reason is air conditioning.

Last year, you had to pay almost $500 extra to get air conditioning. You'll have to pay it again this year on a Ford, Chev, or Plymouth. But not on an Ambassador!

On Ambassador, air-conditioning is included, at no extra cost!

This is a fully-integrated air conditioning system designed for us by Kelvinator. It can take a hot, sticky day and cool it as low as you like.

In winter, the same big blowers and extra vents warm things up much faster.

Ambassador's concern for your comfort doesn't stop with the temperature. Rattle-free single unit construction, coil spring seats, double weather seals on doors and windows and a one-piece acoustical fibreglass ceiling are all standard features.

Like we said, the most comfortable full-size car we've ever built. It starts at $3289 (fob the factory in Brampton, Ontario).

Join the cool 10,000 who'll buy Ambassador this year. See your local American Motors dealer. But do it soon . . . once it gets hot out, there'll be a crowd.

Island Squad Defeated Despite Distaff Edge

By STEVE POTTER

Kit Knight made like a one-man track team Sunday afternoon, but it wasn't enough for the home team as UBC edged Vancouver Island 154-141 in a dual meet at Centennial Stadium.

Knight chalked up victories in the 120-yard and 440-yard hurdles, took second in the long jump, and grabbed third in the triple jump for a 15-point contribution.

His efforts were backed up by a spectacular sweep of the sprint events, as Bill Fediw and Bob Hissink flashed to a one-two finish in the 100, then reversed the order in the 220.

UBC had the depth, however, and domination in the middle distances and field events gave the Vancouver men a decided edge in the points as they outscored the Islanders 105-84.

Gordie Dong came up with a sterling performance for UBC that earned him a first in the long jump, and second-place finishes in the 120-yard hurdles, triple jump and high jump.

CLIFF SPECTACULAR

UBC's Ken French took firsts in both the 880 and the mile for a double in the gruelling middle distances.

But Victoria's spectacular John Cliff cut off the UBC winning streak in the distances. After finishing second in the mile, Cliff bounced back for a runaway victory in the three-mile. Leading throughout the race, he broke loose with a devastating drive in the last lap, to win by 240 yards.

UBC men won both the 440-yard and mile relays.

On the distaff side, the Vancouver Island squad topped the UBC team 57-49, but the mainland university finished with 154-141 aggregate victory in the meet.

Gail Turney and Janis Huck combined to sweep the women's sprints with some fine times in the 100 and 200-yard dashes. Miss Turney clocked in at 10.9 and 26.0 to win both events, while Miss Huck was right on her heels.

Runners Get Revenge By Beating Courtenay

Revenge was sweet, as First United Roadrunners downed defending champion Courtenay High School 40-27 Saturday to take the B.C. juvenile girl's basketball crown at Victoria High School.

Courtenay had edged first United in the championship game last year by a mere two points.

By winning the Runners extended their victory streak to 20 games in league and tournament play.

Roadrunners entered the final of the four-team tourney by defeating Cordova Bay 43-18. Courtenay gained the final by downing First United Phantoms 38-13.

Cordova Bay nicked Phantoms 25-24 in the consolation final.

Balance of the all-stars were Roadrunners Ann McKeachie, Sue Maybee and Diedre Ogden.

Loss to Ashe Sad Farewell For Emerson

NEW YORK (AP) — Lt. Arthur Ashe of the U.S. Army gave former world champion Roy Emerson a sad forewell to amateur tennis by stunning the veteran Australian 6-4, 6-4, 7-5 Saturday night for The Garden Challenge Trophy.

Ashe, a string-bean from Richmond, Va., who is the first Negro member of the U.S. Davis Cup team, gave American tennis prestige a shot in the arm with an overpowering performance against an off-form Emerson.

Emerson, 29, winner of two Wimbledon, U.S. and French titles and six times champion of Australia, will sign a $100,000 pro contract Monday in Los Angeles.

Little Nancy Richey of San Angelo, Tex., made it an all-American sweep by beating Judy Tegart of Australia 7-5, 7-5 for the women's crown.

LYNDON JOHNSON'S FINEST HOUR, SAY CRITICS

'Great Patriot . . . Ultimate Sacrifice for Peace'

By MILTON BENJAMIN

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Americans generally agreed today that "it was Lyndon Johnson's finest hour."

Backers of the president, like Rep. Spark M. Matsunaga (D—Hawaii), felt Johnson—in announcing he would not seek re-election—had made "the ultimate sacrifice for world peace."

Critics of Johnson's Vietnam policy, like Sen. J. William Fulbright (D—Ark.), viewed the president's decision as "an act of a very great patriot."

The overwhelming congressional reaction to the president's surprise announcement was summed up by Sen. Jacob K. Javits (R—N.Y.).

"In such a grave hour of war and national doubt, the president has lifted the presidency to its proper place—far away from politics."

Sen. Frank Church (D—Idoaho), like Javits a critic of Johnson's policies in Vietnam, said: "It was Lyndon Johnson's finest hour.

"Every American tonight should honor the president of the United States," Church said. "He is taking those steps best suited to bring an end to the war in Vietnam, and he is making the supreme political sacrifice to further strengthen his search for peace."

Johnson, whose penchant for keeping his plans secret is well known, was 100 per cent successful concerning his action not to run for another term.

"I couldn't have been more surprised if I had read my own death notice," said Sen. Philip Hart (D—Mich.).

Rep. Wright Patman (D—Texas), a close friend of Johnson's, termed the announcement "the greatest shock I've ever had in politics. This is like a Pearl Harbor in politics."

When Texas Governor John Connally was handed a note telling him of Johnson's announcement, one of the governor's aides concluded from the look on his face there must have been a death in the family.

Richard M. Nixon, the only major Republican presidential candidate, said he had not expected Johnson to withdraw. He predicted that Vice-President Hubert Humphrey or "someone espousing the Johnson philosophy" would seek the Democratic nomination in the president's place.

Humphrey, reached by newsmen in Mexico City, said the president's decision was "a sad moment for me." But he said Johnson's speech will "serve a great cause, the cause of peace."

Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, who entered the Democratic presidential race two weeks ago, learned the news when he stepped off an airplane in New York City. He had no immediate comment but scheduled a news conference for this morning.

Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy, who came within a handful of votes of defeating Johnson in the New Hampshire primary, paid tribute to the president as a "man who has given so many years of service to his country." But he said Johnson's withdrawal had increased his own presidential prospects.

Republican and Democratic leaders agreed that presidential candidates of both parties—as well as the Communist leaders in Hanoi—would have to reassess their positions on Vietnam and the 1968 elections.

Sen. Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, a former GOP national chairman, called on New York Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller to reconsider his decision not to run and "become a candidate in this time of great crisis and great challenge for America."

Sen. Frank Carlson (R—Kan.) said Johnson's decision means "Republicans will have to do some soul-searching before our convention."

Several lawmakers predicted the Democrats would ignore Johnson's announcement and draft him to run again.

Rep. Roman Pucinski (D—Ill.) said "It is my judgment that the convention won't allow a man with one of the best records of any president to cash in his chips."

There was some negative reaction.

Rep. Joe Waggoner (D—La.) said: "I though he would be more of a fighter than this. I didn't think he would out rope and run."

Republican Governor Tom McCall of Oregon said it is "a sad commentary on our times whenever the commander in chief is forced to lay down his sword in the middle of a war."

LBJ Followed Truman Script

WASHINGTON (AP)—Lyndon Johnson followed the script of Harry Truman in stunning the U.S. with the news he won't seek another term as president.

Johnson is the seventh incumbent U.S. president to announce he would not seek re-election.

He chose to insert his announcement in his lengthy Vietnam speech, broadcast and telecast to a mammoth Sunday night audience at an hour which the broadcasters call "prime time."

Except for six persons, his announcement was totally unexpected. Reporters who watched him read his speech in his office did not get full transcripts until after it was finished.

Johnson had confided only in Mrs. Johnson, Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey, State Secretary Dean Rusk, Defence Secretary Clark M. Clifford, Robert S. McNamara, former Pentagon chief and now president of the World Bank, and press secretary George Christian.

The announcement came in just one sentence after Johnson stressed that with a burdensome war going on and with serious problems to be faced at home, he had no time to devote to partisan causes:

"Accordingly, I shall not seek, and I will not accept, the nomination of my party for another term as your president."

Truman also inseretd his historic announcement into a prepared text whcih he delivered March 29, 1952, at a Democratic party Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner in Washington.

He took four sentences to say it:

"I shall not be a candidate for re-election. I have served my country long and, I think, efficiently and honestly. I shall not accept a renomination. I do not feel that it is my duty to spend another four years in the White House."

There were cries of "No! No!" in Truman's audience.

There were no such cries in Johnson's quiet office.

The drama of Johnson's announcement was in stark contrast to the way Calvin Coolidge handled his exit from the White House.

Coolidge was vacationing in the Black Hills of South Dakota when he summoned a few reporters to his office in the Rapid City high school and handed each of them a slip of paper bearing the words:

"I do not choose to run for president in 1928."

Other incumbent presidents who have declined to seek re-election were James K. Polk, James Buchanan, Rutherford B. Hayes and Theodore Roosevelt.

SHORTLY after President Johnson made the announcement he would not seek re-election, these youths showed up outside the White House with this big sign saying "Thanks—LBJ." The president spoke from his White House office. (AP Wirephoto).

'What Happened To Bag of Tricks?'

By HARRY KELLY

A joy sometimes. An awesome responsibility most of the time. But always his.

So there was stunning shock when Johnson disclosed at the end of his speech Sunday night that he would neither seek nor accept renomination this year.

President Johnson was writing finis to what has been described as the most personalized presidency in American history—a president with a telephone always at hand, a president who kept a worried eye on light bills as well as congressional bills.

CLOUDY BEGINNING

His administration began under the cloud of John F. Kennedy's assassination, when a stricken nation in November, 1963, turned to look at its new president.

It was the master politician who moved almost immediately to assure the country of continuity in the White House. He seemed a man proving a worthy successor to Kennedy.

By the time the 1964 election rolled around Johnson had got through Congress major portions of the stalled Kennedy program—including a civil rights bill, a major tax cut and anti-poverty legislation.

As Johnson was piling up successes, his "come let us reason together" became as well-known a slogan as "all the way with LBJ."

But the war in Vietnam was taking a turn that would haunt him from Capitol Hill to the dissident college campus.

In August, 1964, with the election only four months away, American destroyers reported they had been attacked by North Vietnamese

His Major Requests Will Go Down Drain

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Did President Johnson's legislative program die with announcement he will not seek re-election? Some of it probably did. Paradoxically, some of it may have been revived.

It is generally accepted as an article of political faith that a president's influence with Congress declines from the moment it is known he is serving his last term. Certainly he loses some of his leverage.

Down the Drain

On the other hand, it can be argued that as a noncandidate a president's motives are less open to question. To that extent what he asks of Congress can be considered more on its merits.

It appears that Johnson's major requests of the 90th Congress could be affected both ways. A lot of them, involving new outlays of money, will go down the drain, and probably would have anyway.

But what he most wants from this Congress, and has not been able to get, is a 10 per cent tax boost to help finance the Vietnam war, combat inflation, and stabilize the dollar in international trade.

Priorities

In his address Sunday night, Johnson said: "On many occasions, I have pointed out that, without higher taxes or decreased expenditures, next year's deficit would again be around $20 billion.

"I have emphasized the need to set strict priorities in our spending. I have stressed that failure to act—promptly and decisively—would raise very strong doubts throughout the world about America's willingness to keep its financial house in order.

"Yet Congress has not acted and tonight we face the sharpest financial threat in the post-war era . . ."

Some Congressional sources say Johnson's announcement he will not run may have provided the key to break the deadlock on taxes. There were some signs it was about ready to break anyway.

More Messages

But one Congressional veteran, Rep. Wright Patman, D—Tex., doubted there would be any further significant action by Congress. "Congress is practically over for this session," Patman said. He reasoned that lawmakers would want to wait until after the November elections to hear the views of the new president-elect.

One problem has been that Johnson, although calling for fiscal restraint and national austerity to go along with the proposed higher taxes, had sent Congress a barrage of messages suggesting innumerable social, economic, educational and other advances.

They all would cost money.

As a noncandidate Johnson presumably is freed of liberal pressures for continued expansion of welfare programs. The way should be clear now for him to concur in the budget cuts that may spring the tax boost.

Although he characterized his current budget a tight one, the president said Sunday night he would approve "appropriate reductions in the January budget when and if Congress so decides that this should be done."

More immediately, administration forces face a crucial test in the House on a Senate-passed civil rights and open housing bill. Johnson has endorsed this but has left the battle primarily to others.

His decision not to seek re-election was not seen as affecting the outcome of that fight. His House lieutenants believe they have the votes to pass the Senate bill by a narrow margin.

MADE DECISION LAST NOVEMBER

Move Irrevocable; Won't Be Drafted

By RICHARD HARWOOD
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — President Johnson, in a conversation with reporters shortly before midnight, said his decision not to run this year is "irrevocable" and that he is subject to no "draft."

He is uncertain whether he will campaign for the Democratic ticket in November, whether he will attend the party's convention in Chicago in August, or whether he will endorse anyone for the nomination.

The president ate chocolate pudding and looked comfortable and relaxed in a blue turtle-neck shirt, as he chatted in his White House living quarters following his stunning announcement to the nation.

FEEL 'GOOD'

"I feel as good," he said, "as a fellow could who's gone through what I've gone through today."

His health, said Mr. Johnson, is "perfect" and his decision to withdraw from politics in 1968 was based solely on his desire to "get the big job done."

By that, he said, he meant working for peace in Vietnam.

"I don't feel very good," said the president, "about asking one-half million (American) men to stand out there (in Vietnam). I want to put myself in the position to do my job as successfully as they do theirs.

"If I don't have the aura of political campaigning around me, my efforts might be a little more fruitful.

"I do think now is the time to try to remove yourself from any selfish actions and try to turn in as good a result as the men out there are turning in. I'm doing what I think is right."

FAVORABLE RESULTS

He implied that his proposals Sunday night to de-escalate the war through a major reduction of bombing have already had favorable results.

These were in the form of "favorable responses" from unidentified capitals, although he said he had heard nothing from North Vietnam.

He declined to discuss the possibility that his de-escalation proposals had been tied to discussions that may have gone on with "third party" representatives who were prepared to mediate between his country and North Vietnam.

Mrs. Johnson was present briefly and said she had "mixed feelings" about her husband's decision, but that it came as no surprise to her. They had discussed it for months and she was aware of the statement he intended to make Sunday night.

AWARE OF MOVE

Vice-President Humphrey, the president said, was aware of his thinking, but was not specifically informed that the announcement would be made Sunday night.

Mr. Johnson said the "turning point" in his mind came last November, while Gen. William Westmoreland was visiting here.

But the decision, he said, had nothing to do with Westmoreland or with reports from Vietnam at that time.

He had taken into account, he said, the "dissension in the country" and said Sen. Robert Kennedy's emergence as a presidential candidate had "added to the general situation."

The main factor, however, was his desire to seek a peace in Vietnam unencumbered, he said, with the "aura of a political campaign."

STAY HOME

50,000 Reservists To Get Call

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The administration plans to call up substantially more than 13,500 reservists — perhaps more than 50,000 — in the weeks and months ahead, defence officials said today.

The first call-ups are expected to come in the next three days. They will supply some of the 13,500 support forces which President Johnson said Sunday night he was sending to Vietnam to bring certain units to "maximum combat effectiveness."

In addition, officials disclosed, some U.S. Marines recently sent to Vietnam on an emergency basis are expected to be returned to this country and they will be replaced by some army reservists.

On top of all this, authoritative sources said, the Pentagon is studying plans to replenish the pool of active forces in the United States with a reserve call-up of up to 50,000 men. These men would not be sent to Vietnam.

Observers Doubt Hanoi Be More Willing to Talk

By STEWART HENSLEY

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Diplomatic observers doubted today that Hanoi would be more willing to talk peace because President Johnson stopped bombing most of North Vietnam and renounced aspirations for another term.

Hanoi was deemed more likely to interpret his decisions as the swan song of a leader who decided that the American public no longer would support the course he had been pursuing.

The president invested his peace efforts with greater authority by removing them from the political arena as far as his own future is concerned.

And his order to American commanders to halt virtually all bombing of North Vietnam should strengthen the U.S. position with many foreign nations, including a number of allies who have found the bombing the most objectionable part of American operations.

Johnson, in urging President Ho Chi Minh to respond with a reciprocal reduction in military activity and moves toward the peace table, also pledged that the American people would never accept a settlement which did not guarantee the South Vietnamese the right to determine their own future.

Hanoi may well consider that Johnson is in no position to make such a pledge because:

- He would not be in a position to speak for the U.S. government and control its actions and policy after Jan. 20.
- He acknowledged that one of the principal reasons for deciding not to seek or accept the nomination again was that the American people already were badly divided on war policy and his candidacy would only make this worse.

The president's decision undoubtedly will dismay leaders of the Saigon government as well as many American military commanders.

By ending all bombing of North Vietnam except for the region immediately north of the Demilitarized Zone and limiting the increase in American troops to 13,500, he has made it clear that the escalation sought by Saigon is not in the cards. He also has put U.S. commanders on notice that they are going to have to make more efficient use of the forces they already have.

In talking about the ultimate and principal responsibility of the South Vietnamese to save themselves, Johnson put them on the spot. He promised them more equipment and praised their intention to clean up the government and increase the effectiveness of their military forces. However, in the context of his remarks, this praise was in effect a warning.

Johnson and his top advisers have never believed that Hanoi would negotiate in good faith. They always have felt that if the Communists agreed to talk, it would be for the purpose of buying time to regroup and increase infiltration if the military tide appeared to be running against them.

Against that background it was difficult to believe that the president had any real expectation that his lowering of the level of military operations would result in any willingness to talk peace on terms other than those which SENATOR Robert Kennedy had a broad smile but no comment Sunday night on his arrival in New York after learning of President Johnson's decision. He spoke at a press conference today, saying he did not think Johnson's move had healed the split in the Democratic party caused by the Vietnam war. (AP Wirephoto).

HERE'S THE LINEUP OF TOP CANDIDATES

DEMOCRATS

VICE-PRESIDENT HUMPHREY —Totally loyal to Johnson, Humphrey had been commonly expected to make his bid for the presidency in 1972. Johnson's withdrawal seems bound to thrust Humphrey in to the limelight or out of the political arena altogether. Humphrey, 57, served two Senate terms and part of a third before Johnson tapped him for his running mate in 1964.

ROBERT KENNEDY — The junior Senator from New York declared his candidacy March 16 after Sen. Eugene McCarthy's surprise showing against Johnson in the New Hampshire primary. Kennedy, 43, was criticized by some Demoncrats for making a belated decision that split the party, but he has drawn crowds around the country in the last two weeks. The nation's youth appear to be Kennedy's greatest asset; the distrust of many Democratic organization leaders his greatest liability—plus the almost enmity of Lyndon Johnson.

EUGENE MCCARTHY — Off to a slow start in early December, McCarthy's campaign against the administration's Vietnam war policy got an enormous lift from his strong New Hampshire showing. His stock had been expected to spurt again if he topped Johnson Tuesday in Wisconsin's primary. But regardless of the outcome, detractors new can say McCarthy ran up his votes against a non-candidate. Meantime, Kennedy has siphoned off much of McCarthy's appeal as a "peace" candidate. But the 52-year-old Minnesotan vows he is in it to the end.

REPUBLICANS

RICKARD NIXON — The former vice-president, although often labeled a loser since his unsuccessful races for president in 1960 and governor of California in 1962, has long been the favorite among GOP party officials. He is clearly the front-runner at this point. But Nixon, 55, has been forced to campaign without competition and, in an attempt to avoid a Liberal-Conservative schism in his party, has taken a middle course on issues.

RONALD REAGAN — Persuasive, personable and often controversial, the former movie actor has chosen to wait in the wings rather than actively campaign for the nomination. Regan, 57, has been termed a possible standard bearer for GOP conservatives since his 1966 victory over Pat Brown for governor of California — despite the fact he never before held public office. Reagan has said repeatedly he is not a presidential candidate.

NELSON ROCKEFELLER — Although Rockefeller made two unsuccessful bids for the GOP nomination and has sworn since 1964 that he would never again seek the presidency, no one quite relieved him. Rockefeller amazed the nation, therefore, when he announced March 21 that he would not do battle with Nixon. The 59-year-old New York Governor was the strongest backer of Michigan Gov. George Romney. And when Romney withdrew from the presidential race days before the New Hampshire primary, Rockefeller was thought a sure bet to announce his own candidacy. But he said he found too many GOP officials committed to Nixon and decided his candidacy would only divide the party. But he said he would accept a draft. Johnson's decision could induce Rockefeller to change his mind.

'WE HAD NO ADVANCE WARNING'

TEXT OF JOHNSON'S SPEECH

WASHINGTON (AP) — The text of President Johnson's broadcast talk on the Vietnam war:

Tonight I want to speak to you on peace in Vietnam and South Asia.

No other question so preoccupies our people. No other dream so absorbs the 250 million human beings who live in that part of the world. No other goal motivates American policy in Southeast Asia.

For years, representatives of our government and others have traveled the word—seeking to find a basis for peace talks.

Since last September, they have carried the offer I made public at San Antonio.

It was this:

That the United States would stop its bombardment of North Vietnam when that would lead promptly to productive discussions—and that we would assume that North Vietnam would not take military advantage of our restraint.

Hanoi denounced this offer, both privately and publicly. Even while the search for peace was going on, North Vietnam rushed their preparations for a savage assault on the people, the government, and the allies of South Vietnam.

'Attack Failed'

Their attack—during the Tet holidays—failed to achieve its principal objectives.

It did not collapse the elected government of South Vietnam or shatter its army—as the Communists had hoped.

It did not produce a "general uprising" among the people of the cities. The Communists were unable to maintain control of any city. And they took very heavy casualties.

But they did compel the South Vietnamese and their allies to move certain forces from the countryside, into the cities.

They caused widespread disruption and suffering. Their attacks, and the battles that followed, made refugees of half a million human beings.

The Communists may renew their attack. They are, it appears, trying to make 1968 the year of decision in South Vietnam—the year that brings, if not final victory or defeat, at least a turning point in the struggle.

This much is clear:

If they do mount another round of heavy attacks, they will not succeed in destroying the fighting power of South Vietnam and its allies.

But tragically, this is also clear: many men—on both sides of the struggle—will be lost. A nation that has already suffered 20 years of warfare will suffer once again. Armies on both sides will take new casualties. And the war will go on.

There is no need for this to be so.

No Need to Delay

There is no need to delay the talks that could bring an end to this long and bloody war.

Tonight, I renew the offer I made last August—to stop the bombardment of North Vietnam. We ask that talks begin promptly, and that they be serious talks on the substance of peace. We assume that during those talks Hanoi would not take advantage of our restraint.

We are prepared to move immediately toward peace through negotiations.

Tonight, in the hope that this action will lead to early talks, I am taking the first step to de-escalate the conflict. We are reducing—substantially reducing—the present level of hostilities. And we are doing so unilaterally, and at once.

Tonight, I have ordered our aircraft and naval vessels to make no attacks on North Vietnam, except in the area north of the demilitarized zone (DMZ) where the continuing enemy build-up directly threatens allied forward positions and where movements of troops and supplies are clearly related to that threat.

The area in which we are stopping our attacks includes almost 90 per cent of North Vietnam's population, and most of its territory. Thus there will be no attacks around the principal populated areas, and in the food-producing areas of North Vietnam.

Even this limited bombing of the north could come to an early end—if our restraint is matched by restraint in Hanoi. But I cannot in conscience stop all bombing so long as to do so would immediately and directly endanger the lives of our men and our allies. Whether a complete bombing halt becomes possible in the future will be determined by events.

Our purpose in this action is to bring about a reduction in the level of violence that now exists.

Save Lives

It is to save the lives of brave men—and of innocent women and children. It is to permit the contending forces to move closer to a political settlement. Tonight, I call upon the United Kingdom and the Soviet Union—as co-chairmen of the Geneva Conferences, and as permanent members of the United Nations Security Council—to do all they can to move from the unilateral act of de-escalation I have just announced towards genuine peace in Southeast Asia.

Now, as in the past, the United States is ready to send its representatives to any forum, at any time, to discuss a means of bringing this war to an end.

I am designating one of our most distinguished Americans, Ambassador Averell Harriman, as my personal representative for such talks. In addition, I have asked Ambassador Llewellyn Thompson, who returned from Moscow for consultations, to be available to join Ambassador Harriman at Geneva or any other suitable place just as soon as Hanoi agrees to a conference.

I call upon President Ho Chi Minh to react favorably to this new step toward peace.

But if peace does not come now through negotiations, it will come when Hanoi understands that our common resolve is unshakeable and our common strength is invincible.

Tonight, we and other allied nations are contributing 600,000 fighting men to assist 700,000 South Vietnamese troops in defending their country.

Our presence there has always rested on this basic belief: the main burden of preserving their freedom must be carried by the South Vietnamese themselves.

We and our allies can only help to provide a shield—behind which the people of South Vietnam can survive and develop. On their efforts—on their determination and resourcefulness—the outcome will ultimately depend.

Suffered Terribly

That small, beleaguered nation has suffered terrible punishment for more than 20 years.

I pay tribute once again to the great courage and endurance of its people. South Vietnam supports armed forces of almost 700,000 men today—the equivalent of more than 10 million in our own population. Its people maintain their firm determination to be free of domination by the north.

There has been substantial progress in building a durable government during the past three years. The South Vietnam of 1965 could not have survived the enemy's Tet offensive of 1968. The elected government of South Vietnam survived that attack—and is rapidly repairing the devastation it wrought.

The South Vietnamese know that further efforts are required:

—to expand their armed forces,

—to move back into the countryside,

—to increase their taxes,

—to select the very best men they have for civil and military responsibility,

—to achieve a new unity within their constitutional government,

—and to include in the national effort all those groups who wish to preserve South Vietnam's control over its own destiny.

Last week President Thieu ordered the mobilization of 35,000 additional South Vietnamese. He plans to reach—as soon as possible—a total military strength of some 800,000 men.

To achieve this, the Government of South Vietnam started the drafting of 19-year-olds on March 1st. On May 1st, the Government will begin drafting 18-year-olds.

Last month, 10,000 men volunteered for military service—two and a half times the number of volunteers during the same month last year. Since the middle of January, more than 48,000 South Vietnamese have joined the armed forces—nearly half of them volunteers.

All men in the South Vietnamese armed forces have had their tours of service extended for the duration of the war, and reserves are now being called for active duty.

President Thieu told his people last week:

"We must make greater efforts and accept more sacrifices because, as I have said many times, this is our country. The existence of our nation is at stake, and this is mainly a Vietnamese responsibility."

He warned his people that a major national effort is required to root out corruption and incompetence at all levels of government.

More Equipment

We applaud this evidence of renewed determination on the part of South Vietnam. Our first priority will be to support their effort.

We shall accelerate the re-equipment of South Vietnam's armed forces—to meet the enemy's increased firepower. This will enable them progressively to undertake a larger share of combat operations against the Communists.

We are prepared to send—during the next five months—support troops totalling approximately 13,500 men.

A portion of these men will be made available from our active forces. The balance will come from Reserve component units which will be called up for service.

Actions we have taken since the beginning of the year

—to re-equip the South Vietnamese forces,

—to meet our responsibilities in Korea, as well as in Vietnam,

—to meet price increases and the cost of activating and deploying reserve forces,

—to replace helicopters and provide the other military supplies we need, will require additional expenditures.

The estimate of those additional expenditures is 2.5 billion dollars in this fiscal year, and 2.6 billion in the next fiscal year.

As Hanoi considers its course, it should be in no doubt of our intentions. It must not miscalculate the pressures within our democracy in this election year.

We have no intention of widening this war.

But the United States will not accept a fake solution to this long and arduous struggle and call it peace.

No one can foretell the precise terms of an eventual settlement.

Our objective in South Vietnam has never been the annihilation of the enemy. It has been to bring about a recognition in Hanoi that its objective—taking over the South by force—could not be achieved.

Peace can be based on the Geneva Accords of 1954—under political conditions that permit the South Vietnamese—all the South Vietnamese—to chart their course free of any outside domination or interference.

Tonight I also reaffirm the pledge we made at Manila—that we are prepared to withdraw our forces from South Vietnam as the other side withdraws its forces to the North, stops infiltration, and the level of violence thus subsides.

'Done All We Could'

Our goal of peace and self-determination in Vietnam is directly related to the future of Southeast Asia—where much has happened to inspire confidence during the past 10 years. We have done all that we could to contribute to that confidence.

A number of its nations have shown what can be accomplished under conditions of security. Since 1966 Indonesia, the fifth largest nation in the world, has had a government dedicated to peace with its neighbors and improved conditions for its own people. Political and economic cooperation between nations has grown rapidly.

Every American can take pride in the role we have played in Southeast Asia, We can rightly judge—as responsible Southeast Asians themselves do—that the progress of the past three years would have been far less likely—if not impossible—if America and others had not made the stand in Vietnam.

At Johns Hopkins University, three years ago, I announced that we would take part in the great work of developing Southeast Asia, including the Mekong Valley—for all the people of the region. Our determination to help build a better land—for men on both sides of the present conflict—has not diminished. Indeed, the ravages of war have made it more urgent than ever.

I repeat tonight what I said at Johns Hopkins—that North Vietnam could take its place in this common effort just as soon as peace comes.

Over time, a wider framework of peace and security in Southeast Asia may become possible. The new cooperation of the nations of the area could be a foundation-stone. Certainly friendship with the nations of such a Southeast Asia.

People Want Peace

It will come because the people of Southeast Asia want it—those whose armies are at war today, and those who, though threatened, have thus far been spared.

Peace will come because Asians were willing to work for it—to sacrifice for it—to die for it.

But let it never be forgotten: peace will come also because America sent her sons to help secure it.

It has not been easy—far from it. During the past four and a half years, it has been my fate and responsibility to be commander-in-chief. I have lived—daily—with the cost of this war. I know the pain it has inflicted and the misgivings it has aroused.

Throughout this period, I have been sustained by a single principle:

That what we are doing now, in Vietnam, is vital not only to the security of Asia, but to our own security.

Surely we have treaties which we must respect, and commitments we must keep. Resolutions of Congress testify to the need to resist aggression in Southeast Asia.

But the heart of our involvement in South Vietnam has always been America's security.

And the larger purpose of our involvement has always been to help the nations of Southeast Asia become independent, self-sustaining members of the world community.

—At peace with themselves, and with all others.

With such an Asia, our country—and the world—will be far more secure than it is tonight.

I believe that a peaceful Asia is far nearer to reality, because of what America has done in Vietnam. I believe that the men who endure the dangers of battle there are helping the entire world avoid far greater conflicts than this one.

The peace that will bring them home will come. Tonight I have offered the first in what I hope will be a series of mutual moves toward peace.

I pray that it will not be rejected by the leaders of North Vietnam. I pray that they will accept it as a means by which the sacrifices of their own people may be ended.

Words of JFK

Finally, my fellow Americans, let me say this. Of those to whom much is given, much is asked. I cannot say—no man could say—that no more will be asked of us. Yet I believe that now—no less than when the decade began—this generation of Americans is willing to:

Pay any price, bear any burden, meet any hardship, support any friend, oppose any foe, to assure the survival and the success of liberty.

Since those words were spoken by John F. Kennedy the people of American have kept that compact with mankind's noblest cause. We shall continue to keep it.

Yet I believe we must always be mindful of this one thing:

Whatever the trials and tests ahead, the ultimate strength of our country and our cause will lie not in powerful weapons or infinite resources or boundless wealth—but in the unity of our people.

A Free Man

This I believe very deeply.

Throughout my public career, I have followed the personal philosophy that I am a free man, an American, a public servant, and a member of my party — in that order, always and only. For 37 years in the service of our nation—as congressman, as senator, as vice president, and as your president—I have put the unity of the people first, ahead of any divisive partisanship.

In these times, as in times before, it is true that a house divided against itself—by the spirit of faction, of party, of region, of religion, of race—is a house that cannot stand.

There is a division in the American house now. Holding the trust that is mine—as president of all the people—I cannot disregard the peril to the progress of the American people and the hope and prospects of peace for all peoples. I would ask all Americans—whatever their personal interest or concerns—to guard against divisiveness and all its consequences.

Commitment Kept

Fifty-two months and 10 days ago, in a moment of tragedy and trauma, the duties of this office fell upon me. I asked then for "your help and God's" that we might continue America on its course, binding up our wounds, healing our history, moving forward in new unity to clear the American agenda and to keep the American commitment for all our people.

United, we have kept that commitment—and enlarged it.

Through all time to come, America will be a stronger nation, a more just society, a land of greater opportunity and fulfilment because of what we have done together in these years of unparalleled achievement.

Our reward will come in the life of freedom and peace and hope that our children will enjoy through ages ahead.

What we won when all our people united must not now be lost in suspicion, distrust, and selfishness among any of our people.

Partisan Divisions

Believing this as I do, I have concluded that I should not permit the presidency to become involved in the partisan divisions that are developing in this political year.

With America's sons in the field far away, with America's future under challenge here at home, with our hopes—and the world's hopes—for peace in the balance every day, I do not believe that I should devote an hour of my time to any personal partisan causes or to any duties other than the awesome duties of this office.

Accordingly, I shall not seek—and will not accept—the nomination of my party for another term as your president. Let men everywhere, however, know that a strong, confident, vigilant America stands ready to seek an honorable peace and to stand ready to defend an honored cause, whatever the price, whatever the burden, whatever the sacrifice that duty may require.

Thank you for listening tonight and may God bless all of you.

From Reuters—AP

SAIGON (CP) — Senior South Vietnamese diplomats reacted with incredulity and dismay today at President Johnson's shock announcement to virtually stop bombing North Vietnam and not to run again for president.

One senior diplomat said the announcement was a turning point of the war that would benefit North Vietnam.

He said such decisions in the past were usually a matter of bilateral discussions. "As far as I know we had no advance warning of this," he said.

Informed observers however believed Johnson's announcement was communicated in advance to South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu.

HOPES FOR CHANGE

One diplomat said he hoped a way could be found to reverse Johnson's decision not to run for the presidency. "We can only look on such a prospect with dismay," he said.

Johnson's cut on air strikes over the North met heavy criticism in Saigon.

South Vietnamese diplomats pointed out that a proposed increase in American troops would be cancelled out by increased North Vietnamese ability to infiltrate men and arms, replenish stocks and conduct training in the Hanoi-Haiphong region.

Comments from U.S. soldiers on the bombing pause ranged from "they'll bury all of us" to "this means we'll go home sooner."

One said: "I don't care who is president so long as we get home."

A senior officer on Gen. William C. Westmoreland's staff, who refused to let his name be used, said few American soldiers cared whether Johnson ran for re-election or not.

Many did react, however. Some thought reporters were pulling an April Fool's joke and one lieutenant-colonel said: "You never want to believe a politician when he makes an announcement like that."

Westmoreland, who is to be relieved in July as commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam, told a questioner: "Yes, I have a comment. It's no comment."

vessels in the Gulf of Tonkin off North Vietnam.

In a historic escalation of the war, U.S. planes hit installations in North Vietnam and the administration won a congressional resolution approving in advance future actions to fight communism in Southeast Asia.

Critics have since called it a "blank cheque" for escalation and charged the administration's explanation of the Gulf of Tonkin incident was not entirely factual.

After campaigning that Vietnam was a war for the Vietnamese to fight. Johnson defeated Republican Barry Goldwater by a landslide in 1964.

In addition, Johnson was faced with a problem almost as great—and many thought greater—than the war. Beginning with the Negro rioting in Watts in August, 1965, U.S. cities fell prey to summer violence.

Those who had seen Johnson as a political magician began wondering what happened to his wand and bag of tricks.

And the Johnson popularity began dipping in the public opinion polls.

There were many Democrats who thought so—including Senator Robert Kennedy.

But no one seemed willing to take on the head of party—until Senator Eugene McCarthy decided to.

Then Lyndon Johnson surprised them all.

He said he would not run again.

NO GREAT SUPPORT FOR ANY CANDIDATE

Coast Liberals 'Divided'

By VICTOR MACKIE
(Fifth in a Series)

OTTAWA (Staff) — Western Canada is largely unknown territory, as far as Health Minister Allan MacEachen's organization is concerned, when it comes to counting committed delegates.

Last week, the affable 46-year-old bachelor left the friendly East and headed west to explore the hinterlands and beat the bushes for delegates. His organization people describe the Prairies as "totally fluid," with no great waves of support for any particular condidate.

British Columbia causes them to shake their heads in bewilderment. They picture West Coast Liberals as divided into two camps—the "mainland Liberals" and the "upcountry Liberals." The MacEachen people say the two groups "fight each other constantly."

Turner Has Edge

They see no condidate as strong in British Columbia, although they concede that Consumer Affairs Minister John Turner probably has the most committed delegates from that province. But, in the three prairie provinces, they will make no predictions about who will emerge as the "favorite son" candidate.

The MacEachen campaigners found a determined effort on the part of several influential Liberals in Western Canada to try to rally support west of the Great Lakes behind one or two men in the race. But they think it has been a total failure and challenge any candidate who claims to have the bulk of the delegates from Western Canada committed to his camp.

Mr. MacEachen is counting on his support in the Maritimes to give him a solid base on which to build. He is correct in this assessment, of that there is no doubt.

'Our Minister'

Nova Scotia is his home province, just as it is that of Trade Minister Robert Winters. But Mr. MacEachen has the advantage that he has been the cabinet minister from the Martimes in Prime Minister Pearson's administration. (Mr. Winters is the member for York West, and Ontario Riding.) Even if Mr. MacEachen does not win the leadership, he will probably continue as the cabinet minister from the maritimes.

Consequently, the Maritimers, who are practical people, are pledging their first support to Mr. MacEachen. He is "our minister" to them and they are not forgetting it.

In addition, what has hurt Mr. Winters in his appeal for support in the Maritimes is that he has indicated that, if he did not win the post of prime minister, he would be leaving politics. Faced with that choice the Maritimers are giving their support to Mr. MacEachen.

He will have their support so long as he remains on the ballot, according to his workers. Mr. Winters has failed to each hold in he Mariimes to the extent the trade minister's workers had hoped. The MacEachen people claim that Mr. Winters, after he was defeated in the 1957 election seldom returned to the Maritimes to attend a political meeting until January of this year, 10 years later. That, they say, explains the preference for Mr. MacEachen.

Depends on Joey

In Newfoundland, the workers for MacEachen frankly acknowledge everything will depend on who Premier Joseph Smallwood decides should get the support. They think he is "bemused" by Justice Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau.

Mr. Trudeau's support is built on a personality cult, they are convinced. They see it evaporating as rapidly as it materialized, in the hard-nosed political atmosphere of the convention.

Mr. MacEachen's more cautious campaign workers predict he will hold 258 of the 400 Maritime delegates. The more optimistic place the figure at "more than 300." They expect their man to place fourth or fifth on the first ballot. But they are confident that, after the second and third ballots, he will have moved up. Other candidates' organizations disagree. They see Mr. MacEachen with thinly scattered support outside his Maritime base.

In Quebec, the MacEachen organization is adopting a realistic attitude. They are counting on a close association between Manpower Minister Jean Marchand and Mr. MacEachen to produce some interesting results.

First Choice

They suggest that, if Mr. Trudeau wins the convention, Mr. MacEachen could conceivably be his first lieutenant in the cabinet. If Mr. MacEachen wins the leadership, Mr. Trudeau would be his Quebec lieutenant. Mr. Marchand is the power behind the Trudeau campaign in French-speaking Canada but many federal politicians think he will abandon the federal field after the next election is called and enter the Quebec provincial arena.

Ontario is divided among a large number of the candidates. But Mr. MacEachen's people look for him to run second to Agriculture Minister J. J. Greene in eastern Ontario and the Ottawa Valley. In northern Ontario, the MacEachen organizers were hard at work in January and February covering 50 ridings in five weeks. In Toronto, they forecast 10 delegates will vote MacEachen as their first choice. Other organizations challenge this claim; they contend the MacEachen bandwagon is going nowhere outside of the Maritimes.

But the MacEachen camp says their man will return from his Western forays with at least 50 delegates in his bag. They contend that External Affairs Minister Paul Martin is starting to lose support which had built up for him earlier. They predict Mr. MacEachen is picking up much of the strength Mr. Martin is losing.

The first ballot, they think, could show Mr. Martin, Mr. Trudeau and Transport Minister Paul Hellyer, in that order. They see Mr. MacEachen as running fourth in the race at that stage and closing fast with the front runners when subsequent ballots are taken.

Big Selling Job

Their big problem is to convince the delegates that the native of Cape Breton is a national candidate, not just a regional man. They think Mr. MacEachen has been able to do that with his hard-driving campaign in recent weeks. He will concentrate on completing the selling job at the convention.

Obtaining a closed-circuit television network when it was dropped by the national Liberal organization was a major coup scored by the MacEachen group. Gleefully they are making plans to use it to the fullest extent, although they are prepared to make the facilities available at cost to other candidates in certain periods.

The MacEachen group is unhappy with the organization of the Liberal convention. They cite the dropping of the motion on the TV network as typical of bad decisions made.

Mr. MacEachen's workers smile when they hear the suggestion that their man is easy-going. Proudly, but ruefully, they say, "Boy, he's tough." The minister's record of success in the labor department is proof, they say, that he can be tough when he has to be, one of the elements needed to make a good prime minister.

Teachers To Debate Issues

Issues ranging from the size of classes to French language instruction will be debated at the 52nd annual general meeting of the B.C. Teachers' Federation.

Close to 2,000 teachers are expected at the convention in the Penticton Peach Bowl April 15 to 18.

One recommendation will be that the federation continues its campaign on class size begun last fall under which teachers who refused to teach classes of more than 39 students receive full federation support.

The convention will open with something new, a "professional issues day" which will include a panel debate and an address by David Menear, former Scarborough school principal and now education editor of the Toronto Star.

BCTF president Robert Buzza said the issues day was scheduled because teachers are concerned with the role education should play in society.

"Change is occurring so rapidly that there should be a re-definition of the role of the school in society and re-definition of the role of the teacher in that school," he said.

ONE of Russia' most powerful men in the Communist Party, Mikhail A. Suslov, 65, is reported seriously ill. He was not present Saturday for the funeral of cosmonaut Yuri Gagarin, who died last week in a plane crash.

Probe Requested

VANCOUVER (CP)—The Seafarer's International Union last week sent a telegram to Transport Minister Hellyer asking for a formal inquiry into the grounding March 16 of the coastal freighter Tahsis Prince on the west coast of Vancouver Island. Crew of the freighter allege the officers failed to send a distress call that lifeboats could not be launched.

Brown Keeps Post

LONDON (UPI)—Former foreign secretary George Brown has decided to retain his post as deputy leader of the Labor party, he said last week. Brown had been debating whether to keep the job since quitting the cabinet 11 days ago after Prime Minister Wilson's failure to consult him during the gold crisis.

Ice-Choked Rivers Flood Many Villages in Quebec

MONTMAGNY, Que. (CP) — Floods in Montmagny and other riverside communities gradually receded Sunday night, leaving a wake of property damages and homeless residents.

Debris covered 15 streets and 300 persons were either homeless or faced flooded basements early today, as swollen waters of the Riviere du Sud slowly returned to their normal course.

City officials estimated damages at a minimum of $500,000 for the town, 45 miles northeast of Quebec City.

Traffic along the Trans-Canada Highway section that runs through Montmagny was temporarily diverted although most of the flooding receded following dynamiting of a 20-foot ice jam on the river Sunday.

At St. Anselme, about 20 miles southeast of Quebec City, weekend flood waters from the Etchemin River, carried a home 100 feet from its foundation and flooded a foundry.

Meanwhile, 60 miles south on the Chaudiere, an ice jam 1½-miles long formed up before the community of St. Georges-de-Beauce and water flowed over the river banks into home basements.

Mayor Jacques Pinton said the water receded somewhat Sunday night but warm weather could bring new flooding.

Race Riots Called 2 Nations Warring Inside U.S.

DETROIT (AP) . — After drafting a declaration of independence from the United States, delegates to a black nationalist convention turned Sunday to the task of electing officers for their proposed separate Negro nation.

Before they could take office, all those elected would have to renounce their American citizenship and become citizens of the new country, a source close to the convention said.

All officers would be required to take up residency in the South where the new nation was to be made up of five states—Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina and Louisiana.

The officials would be paid a salary from taxes raised through tithes—voluntary contributions of two per cent of the income of each resident of the new nation.

The constitution and declaration of independence drafted Saturday by about 50 convention delegates called for a "government in captivity" supported by Negroes who wished to renounce their American citizenship.

"The objective of the government must be to acquire land, on what is now the U.S. land mass, over which it would have complete control," the draft said.

Aquisition of the land would be "through negotiations with the United States, through political activity and secession, or through a combination of these moves supported by appropriate military action."

"Blacks who go into the street, fight for freedom and fall into the hands of American authorities should, as they then have allegiance to our nation, be treated as prisoners of war rather than common criminals," the drafters said.

The new nation would be called The Songhay Republic after what was described as a medieval African empire."

ZEST with which members of the Soviet Navy Ensemble tackle their program of sea chanteys and folk songs is reflected by these two soloists embarking on an action version of a work song. Featured Violin Soloists 'Superior'

By BERYL PROUDMAN

There need never be a dearth of well-trained musicians in Victoria while Thomas Tucker continues to produce such excellent results as were demonstrated in Sunday's Schools Senior Symphony Orchestra concert in the McPherson Playhouse.

Strings were in the ascendant in the ambitious program of classical music presented. The uniformity of bowing and plucking techniques was a pleasure to see, the variety of tones produced delightful to hear, and the speed with which the players recovered from occasional intonation lapses, encouraging to witness.

Four superior violin soloists were featured in five works. John Rigby dazzled us with his remarkably professional playing of Kreisler's Praeludium and Allegro; and the thrilling clarity of even the highest notes in the Andante from Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto.

The fiendish demands made by a movement from Mozart's Violin Concerto in G, exacted exciting dramatic virtuosity from Ron Comber.

Clearly defined rhythm and clarity of tone enlivened Geoff Cragg's playing of Cappriccio from Vivaldi's A Minor Concerto though some of the faster runs were a little blurred in execution.

Rod Booth not only played the second movement of Handel's Violin Sonata in E with style and understanding, but won a special round of applause for the way in which he played on despite a preliminary lapse of memory brought on by nervous apprehension familiar to all performing musicians.

Although Chris Salm played a very fine flute solo in a movement of Handel's Faithful Shepherd Suite, only in the solo cadenza could the audience hear clearly how well he was playing.

His proximity to the strings combined with the fact that much of his solo was played low on his instrument, prevented the solo tone from cutting through the orchestral parts sufficiently to be heard clearly in the balcony.

The woodwind section added some lovely touches to the Handelian flair and style with which this suite was played.

Bruce Milne's trumpet solo in Saint-Saen's "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice," was played with well-sustained sweetness of tone, but unfortunately, the romantic nature of the selection gave no scope to the resounding brass possibilities of his instrument.

The long-drawn sweet string tone required by Verdi's Prelude to La Traviata was beautifully contrasted by the suitably darkened tone adopted for Beethoven's Egmont Overture which followed it.

Victor Herbert's Babes in Toyland, dedicated to all first and second year violinists in the audience, showed how well the orchestra followed its conductor in rallentandos, pauses and sudden tempo changes.

The final number, Haydn Woods' Manx Overture, brought out a rich fullness of interplaying sections worthy of a professional orchestra.

Here is a witty, way out and rather prolonged satire on the Faust legend in which the Devil grants wishes to mortals in exchange for their souls.

The Devil, in this instance, is English actor-writer Peter Cook and his victim is another actor-writer, Dudley Moore. It seems they have evolved the script between them and, while it sparkles in places and raises plenty of laughs, the satire is a little strained.

Moore plays a modest little short-order cook who hankers inarticulately after waitress Eleanor Bron in a greasy London cafe. The Devil follows him home and offers seven wishes granted, one soul in return.

But, of course, the Devil is mischievous and the seven wishes are fulfilled only in part. Moore is turned into a voluble young intellectual and the waitress into a psychedelic sophisticate. He woos her with a recorded Brahms symphony and she drawls:

"Oh, I just lerve Brahms—I let him flow all over me."

Just as her defences are beginning to crumble, the Devil jogs the record player and a discord breaks the amorous mood.

Later, when Moore attempts suicide, the Devil tells him:

"You should be careful. Suicide is a criminal offence and, in olden times, they'd have hung you for it!"

When Moore asks to be married to the waitress, the Devil makes them man and wife in a stately English mansion. The wife, alas, is a shameless flirt who carries on with the guests.

Subsequently, Moore asks for a perfect spiritual union with his beloved, but fails to specify one important detail. This time both he and the waitress are nuns in a non-speaking nunnery.

Raquel Welch, who won fame as a Stone Age woman wearing tailor-made skins in 1,000,000 Years B.C., again shows off her lovely figure as a night-club stripper who aids the Devil and all his works.

Having signed over 100 billion souls, the Devil tries to get back into Heaven and engages in some droll dialogue with Saint Peter at the golden gate.

TIME TO DISCARD

Remember It's April, Spring Is Here!

By ELIZABETH FORBES

A robin sat on the top of a tree at the back of our house. In the warmth of the early morning sun a butterfly dropped from the crotch of another tree to a cluster of orange yellow polyanthus. Bird calls floated out from the alders beyond the garden. It's April! Spring is here!

Forbes

It's now that the earth really discards its winter garments. A habit many men and women follow. A good many others hoard these garments in boxes and trunks. They hesitate to part with even an old stocking.

How about you? Do you take inventory with the first days of spring? Do you make room in your budget for a new dress ... in your immediate circle for a new friend ... in your mind for a new idea?

Look in your closets. You didn't wear that glitter gown once last year, did you so it's within reason to suppose you will not wear it next year. However, that pretty young girl down the street would love it, wouldn't she?

Take a peak behind those trunks in the basement. How in the world did that old golf sweater and cap get stuck back there? Sort through the dresser drawers you keep saying you are going to tidy up. One glove of a pair won't do you or anybody else any good at all.

If that golf sweater and cap you're hoarding are worth keeping they are worth cleaning and storing properly. But don't hang on to those silly shoes that cramp your toes. Be brave. Give up that tired old coat, the faded orchid, the letter you never should have kept in the beginning.

While you're at it, dispose of that cold little hate. That grudge you've held close to you far too long. That ridiculous slight you've cherished. That tiresome habit. You don't need them. Remember it's April! Spring is here!

The butterfly that dropped from the apple tree in our garden did so in a crazy fluttering rush that told without words it had only recently burst from its cocoon.

It clutched the cluster of flowers so hard they swayed and ducked their heads. The butterfly rested a moment, spread and shut its dark purple red wings several times. Then it flipped itself up in an awkward spiral that took it back in a matter of seconds to the yellow flowers.

Soon it was busy probing its tongue deep into those flowers to find the sweetness known to us as nectar and to a butterfly as food.

A little later this male beauty (by now the brilliance of its color left no doubt it was a male), refreshed and strengthened by nectar and sun, took off again in a higher and wider circle that landed him on the warm red paving of our patio.

Again he opened and closed those dusky red wings edged with yellow and white splotches. This time it was with more assurance. A little more male arrogance. Indeed, I expected him to do a bit of a strut to show his superiority.

I watched as he became more alert. Again he was off in a spirally flight. This time there was no awkward hesitation, no uncertain fluttering, no returning to the warm red flagstones.

The butterfly circled over the trees and out into the alders beyond. Then he dipped again and was out of sight.

I visualized him dropping down beside a smaller female butterfly, then flipping his wings in lordly introduction and settling on the same flower she had chosen for its nectar.

She'd pretend indifference, of course, and move on to another flower. After slight hesitation he'd flutter after her. These moves would be repeated several times until, convinced they were meant for each other, they would seal the bargain in a nuptial flight up and over the trees.

You see it's April! Spring is here!

STUDENT UNREST IN SPAIN

Second University Closed

VALENCIE, Spain (AP) — Authorities temporarily closed the University of Valencia Saturday because of sparse attendance and numerous illegal student meetings in recent days. It was the second big Spanish university closed in two days.

At Sevilla, the university governing body announced expulsion of 23 students who it said were instigators of recent disorders.

Spain's biggest university, the 35,000-student University of Madrid, was closed indefinitely Friday after days of fights between students and police.

Much of the protest has focused on academic reform. Some has been concerned with the Spanish government and the Vietnam war.

Police said two architectural schools connected with the Madrid university were shut down Saturday after unsanctioned gatherings at the schools were broken up.

KICKING UP HER HEELS at old-time costume ball in Saanichton Agricultural Hall is Mrs. Lilly Turner, wearing a bustle and flowered bonnet from the gay 90s. Mrs. Turner is the widow of farmer Jim Turner, well known as a breeder of Shorthorn cattle, and in earlier days, heavy work horses. Ball was the first of several events organized by North and South Saanich Agricultural Society in honor of its 100th anniversary. (Photos by William John).

An Exhausting Good Time Had by All at Costume Ball

It went on past 3 a.m. and everyone had a roaring time at a costume ball in Saanichton Agricultural Hall Saturday night.

Men and women in the styles of 50, 75 and 100 years ago pranced and pirouetted through the highland schottische, the polka, the minuet and the barn dance to the gay music of The Hometowners.

More than 60 box lunches were auctioned and the males who bid highest took the ladies who prepared them into supper. Just an old prairie custom but it was all part of the fun at the first of several events organized by North and South Saanich Agricultural Society in honor of its 100th birthday.

100 COSTUMES

"We were fairly exhausted by 3 a.m.," said Doug McHattie, who acted as master of ceremonies, costumed as a bartender from the Gay 90s.

There were more than 100 period costumes among the 150 men and women attending.

Top prizes were won by Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Ruthven wearing an original 140-year highland kilt and an original 120-year-old Victorian dress; D. Holloway and Mrs. K. Bloomfield in 75-year-old costumes; C. Creed and Mrs. L. Bissett in the styles of 50 years ago.

Proceeds from the ball will go to the society's amateur rodeo to be held at Saanichton May 24 and the annual Saanichton Fair Aug. 31, Sept. 1 and 2. The oldest fair west of the Great Lakes, it was started in September 1868 and has been held every year since.

BILL 33 HIT

Uvic Students Vote $1,500 To Fight SCs

And they've put their money where their mouth is.

At a Sunday night meeting the student-elected representative assembly gave near-unanimous approval to a motion attacking section 18 of the proposed labor law currently before the legislature.

At the same time it voted $1,500 be set aside to fight Social Credit policies if an election is called this summer.

The section of Bill 33 opposed by the students gives the cabinet power to step in during a labor dispute and order binding arbitration. Severe penalties are provided for those not complying.

'UNDEMOCRATIC'

The student motion said the section "is undemocratic and is in opposition to all rights for which labor has fought over the years."

Those speaking in support said the section would legislate away the principle of the right to strike. Similar measures in Australia had only resulted in more labor-management disputes.

Two members abstained from voting.

The motion on the $1,500 states explicitly it is to be used to defeat policies of the Social Credit government.

Suggested ways and means of doing this included door-to-door campaigning at election time and a program to keep the public informed on student dissatisfaction with government policies and action.

Estimates Higher After 'Slashing'

By JIM HUME

Victoria city council finished its first week of budget-cutting with $20,150 more on the estimated bill than when it started.

A week ago the city's "B" Committee started work on paring the $17,595,805 estimated expenditure figures.

As of this morning the original estimates had grown to $17,615,955.

Council members took a day off today, possibly to re-organize their thinking in order to get down to some serious slashing when talks resume Tuesday morning.

To date only the parks department has felt the knife, and gently at that.

On Friday the parks committee managed to trim $6,225 from the parks budget, enough to reduce the $26,375 increase to a little more than $20,000.

TOUGH TASK

It will be parks again Tuesday morning, this time facing the heavy swing of the axe as parks administrator Herb Warren tries to persuade council to spend $228,150 in extraordinary parks expenditures.

The betting is that he will have little success as council members, alarmed at the prospect of an increase in the mill rate, face the inevitable call for retrenchment.

Next will be public works with a total ordinary budget of $579,995—an increase of $42,820 over last year—and an extraordinary budget of $432,497, an increase of $369,352 over last year.

YEAR'S DELAY

Expected to be delayed for at least one year is street work on Blanshard from Pandora to Pembroke ($102,496); design changes outside the Rose-Blanshard urban renewal scheme ($162,914), and various other lower-cost projects.

The necessity to cut back if the tax rate is to be held within reasonable distance of last year, will also mean that a petition from 56 taxpayers protesting the condition of Bowker Creek will probably be received and filed.

The 56 signatories claim that by failing to completely cover the creek the city has made them victims of discrimination which leaves them to face an acknowledged health hazard.

The petition urges council to finish the enclosure job during the summer months.

City manager Dennis Young admitted this morning the job had not been completed and added it is not likely it will be finished this year.

"It is not regarded as one of our priorities," he said. 'We have enclosed the areas where flooding was a problem and realize that one day we must enclose the entire creek. But as it winds in and out of Saanich and Victoria there isn't much point in us doing our sections unless Saanich also does their section.

"As it is it becomes just a matter of priority and we feel there are more important things to do."

Dear Mom and Dad: 'I Goofed Off April Fool's Day'

By DON VIPOND

That's the lesson about 200 students at Oak Bay junior secondary will learn after a stampede from the school this morning.

About one quarter of the pupil population bolted at the end of the first period in what appeared to start as an organized April Fools' stunt. said principal Peter Boldt.

When he spotted the rivers of laughing youngsters pouring from doors and exits he ran outside the building and hollered at the disappearing horde.

"FELT ALONE"

"I really felt very much alone," he said afterwards. The rest of the staff seemed mesmerized by the suddenness of the prank.

Those pupils within sound of Mr. Boldt's shout sheepishly returned.

The rest have been fingered. An immediate roll call produced a list of the missing.

The school has a rule which covers the situation, said the principal. Truants must make up lost time on an hour-for-hour basis.

200 STUDENTS

So about 200 students will be gathering in the school gym soon for dictation.

And this is the letter they'll be writing:

"Dear Mother and Dad,

As an April Fool's joke I ran away from school this morning after the first period. I did this on impulse, following others out the door. Whereas I did not deliberately plan to break school rules, I nonetheless am in control of my faculties and realize that I must make up for lost time on an hour-for-hour basis.

"There is a lesson in all this for me. I have learned how easy it is to follow a mob without thinking, how quickly a situation can get out of hand and result in unfortunate circumstances.

"Please sign this letter so that I may return it to the school.

Stolen $125 Saw Sold for $5 To Store Clerk

A man pleaded guilty in central court today to stealing a $125 power saw and selling it for $5.

Court was told Bennet Sam, 9 Cooper Road, took the saw from a neighbor's home Saturday. He sold it to an employee of a downtown store.

He remanded Sam to April 5 for pre-sentence report.

Ordering the saw returned to the original owner, the magistrate said he would do so "without comment on the subsequent transaction."

New Courses Put Emphasis On Summer Fun

The Greater Victoria school board is launching a package of summer courses to meet a public call for holiday activity opportunities.

The program is for adults, youth and children and is a first for the board's adult education division, said director Jack Dalgleish.

He predicted enrolment might reach 800 this summer with interest mushrooming in years ahead as the program catches on and expands.

Most of the courses will be over three weeks, from July 22 to Aug. 9, with classes on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays. Fees will likely be $12 for adults and $10 for students with organizers hoping the program will break even.

Among courses being planned:

In arts and crafts, intermediate and advanced drawing and painting, pottery, ceramics, clay modelling and sculpture, painting in oils, pastels.

In enrichment courses, public speaking, speed reading, creative writing, typing, language, leadership fundamentals.

In homemaking, classes from elementary dressmaking to tailoring and millinery, including courses for children from 11 to 14.

In sports and recreation, yoga, gymnastics, outdoor barbecuing, fencing and cooking.

Classes, some in the form of workshops and seminars, will be held at the Institute of Adult Studies headquarters on the old Lansdowne campus, at Lansdowne junior secondary and possibly at Oak Bay junior secondary.

NO HIPPIES NEED APPLY

By PETE LOUDON

Apparently aimed at hippies who often wear long hair, sandals, beads, headbands and costumes distinctively different than the majority of people, the new instruction has been sent to all municipal welfare offices.

Noting that some welfare offices have been in doubt on the matter, a provincial memo makes these points:

- Any welfare applicant not certified as "unemployable" must be registered with Manpower for work.
- He or she "must be available for employment through the observance of conventional dress and grooming."
- He or she must not have refused available work.
- And the applicant must not be living in a group where it is indicated other resources are available to meet living costs.

'NO CHANGE'

Victoria welfare director Alex Davidson confirmed the order when questioned today. But he said, "This is no change (for Victoria). It's been the policy here for months."

Mr. Davidson said an able welfare applicant must make himself available for employment. And if he dresses in a manner which repels employers, he is by his own choice, not making himself available for work.

He agreed that the new government instruction may have been issued because not all provincial welfare offices were agreed on the suggestion that clothing should be considered.

Does everyone have a basic right to dress as he pleases? Should he be penalized because he chooses by strange dress to emphasize his individuality? The questions were put to Victoria Low Income Group executive secretary Reg Clarkson.

'SOCIETY'S RIGHT'

He thought that if a person's dress was a matter of religious conscience there might be grounds for saying the rule was an infringement of freedoms.

On the other hand "when a guy's dress becomes a charge on society, then society has a right to clamp down."

A man observing his right to dress as he pleases is acceptable until he infringes on the rights of others by depending on them to support him, Mr. Clarkson suggested.

Man's Leg Broken In Car Crash

Two persons are in hospital as a result of cars going out of control early Sunday.

Graham Russell, 3850 Merriman, is in good condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital with a broken leg.

Oak Bay police said Russell's sports car was demolished after it slammed into a car parked on Henderson Road.

HIT POLE

A passenger, Adele Bewley, 82, of Parksville, was treated for shock and released.

A pedestrian is in good condition in hospital with multiple bruises after she was struck by a car at Fort and Pemberton Saturday night.

Police said Mrs. Mildred Stetsko, 46, of 1346 Stanley, was knocked down by a car driven by James Helm, 640 Douglas.

Four City Lawyers Answer Questions At Forum April 24

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

When will the new divorce laws be in effect and what will be the grounds for divorce?

This is one of 32 questions that will be formally answered by four city lawyers at a public forum in McPherson Playhouse Wednesday, April 24, at 8:30 p.m.

During the intermission the audience will be invited to write down any other questions that bother them and these will be answered during the second half of the forum.

FORMS PROVIDED

Forms will be provided for the questions.

The forum will be presented for the third year running by Victoria Bar Association under the auspices of the Victoria Daily Times and CJVI, 900 Radio, and will be broadcast live from the theatre.

Admission will be by ticket only. They are available free to persons completing the coupons appearing in The Times. The coupon, with further details concerning the forum, will be found in an advertisement on Page 20 today.

Coupons may be sent either to The Times or to radio CJVI. At last year's forum all admission tickets were taken.

Moderator will be Judge Montague Drake and the panel of lawyers will be John C. Scott-Harston, QC, Mrs. Constance Isherwood, Kenneth C. Murphy and Dermod D. Owen-Flood.

ORGAN MUSIC

Reg Stone will play organ music from 7:30 p.m. until the start of the forum at 8:30 p.m.

Among the 32 formal questions to be answered are:

Is a contract to buy a house valid if made on a Sunday?

Do I commit any offence if I carry a partly consumed bottle of liquor in my car?

My parents have no assets and no income. Who is responsible for their support?

How can I evict a tenant who refuses to pay his rent and refuses to leave?

How do I qualify to receive the $1,000 Home Acquisition Grant.

Is there any reason I should retain a lawyer when I intend to plead guilty to a driving offence?

Is my landlord allowed to enter my apartment without permission?

What is the procedure for obtaining a court injunction and what is the purpose of an injunction?

The Spears Sharp in Gorge Races As Sailors Wrestle Flukey Winds

By SHIRLEY HEWETT

The "river" was predictably unpredictable with flukey winds varying from zero to 20 miles per hour.

But 38 skippers in El Toros, Davidsons, and X-Class boats had a ball, including one representative from the Port Angeles Yacht Club and one from Vancouver's Kitsilano Yacht Club.

The scene was Sunday's Gorge races. The morning race went from Craigflower Park to the Inner Harbor. Boats retraced the course in reverse for the afternoon contest.

Predictably, also, the RCNSA Spears family walked off with two of the top three prizes in the El Toro Division.

The Portage Inlet and Gorge Waterways Association trophy was awarded to the over-all winner, with the lowest point total for the two races.

Jill Spear won the combined trophy. Second was Robin Spear followed by Greg Hemphill third.

Winner of the morning race was Bis Whitby, who made the four-mile journey in an hour. She was followed by her husband Bill. Third place went to Vince Martorino.

Individual winner of the afternoon race was Jill Spear, who was followed by Greg Hemphill. Robin Spear placed third.

Over-all winner in the Davidson division was Ed Cushing. Dr. Henry Thompson placed second, with Ken Kidd third.

Other prizes were awarded to Kathy Kidd, Cy Connorton, and "John-John" Mossnikoff from Kitsilano. Lou Boulanger took a special spinnaking prize. He piloted his X-Class boat mostly under spinnaker.

PORT YOUR HELM, lower the mains'l, abandon ship or stand by to repel boarders—the great Gorge sailing race was pandemonium at this turning point when water currents challenged wind currents and El Toros, sabots and Davidson dinghies began dashing off in all directions in the white water near Gorge Bridge Sunday. It was great fun for spectators and mariners, all of whom survived to report that a little pollution doesn't mean the Gorge isn't still a top fun spot.

COMBINE FORCES TO PUT ON SHOW

St. Margaret's School Parents' Auxiliary and the school's Old Girls' Association are co-operating on a fashion show, to be held at the Royal Victoria Yacht Club this Wednesday at 2 p.m. and again at 8 p.m. that day. Fashions will be from the T. Eaton Company and tickets are available at the store's Import Room. Seen finalizing plans are, left to right, the Misses Paula Lovric and Elizabeth Gowan of the OGA, and auxiliary members Mrs. T. H. Butler and Mrs. J. R. McKenzie.

SEW WITH EUNICE FARMER

Dear Eunice Farmer:

As a rule I love to sew. Sometimes I seem to get "sewed out" and sitting down to my machine is almost impossible. The feeling has lasted as long as two months. Is there any cure?

Mrs. A. N.

Dear Mrs. A. N.:

Sounds like you have spring fever and need to do something about it! I would suggest you go out and purchase some absolutely frivolous fabric that is completely different than anything you have ever made before.

You may choose a gay, colorful print and make some hostess pyjamas, a toga, or any kind of fun garment that can be worn at home. If you've never done this, you have missed a very wonderful experience.

You may want to make a dress out of something completely impractical as to color. This too will probably surprise you and in the end you will find there is no such thing today as an impractical color.

What I'm trying to say in brief is this: You are in a rut and need a big boost to get out of it. Forget tradition and make one garment just for fun. Bet it won't be the last one.

New Look for Penny In Spring Cosmetics

By Penny Saver

I have decided to adopt a whole new look in makeup. All my little tubes and bottles were coming to a simultaneous end—something that happens only once in a million years. Such an omen in conjunction with the new, bare look in makeup made me decide to switch. I went down to the store and bought a whole new set of makeup—starting from the bottom.

I decided I would keep the cleansers and such that I had always used, but would be brave and new when it came to my daily look. The first step in the change came with the foundation. The kind I am using now is very fine in texture and it gives a gentle sort of glow. I feel as if I am radiating health. It comes in nine different shades to match every complexion. A jar of this foundation is $7.50.

It makes me blush a little to admit it, but over my foundation I wear a blusher. This is a cream that acts much the same way as old-fashioned rouge. It is much easier to use however. It can be used to brighten up the high points of the face such as the cheeks with a rosy glow, or it can be used over the whole face—though I wouldn't use it this way myself. This blusher is $5 a jar.

The blusher and foundation are so glowing and natural, I hated the thought of covering them with powder. There is, however, a special translucent powder just made to go over these makeups. The powder is just right to let the glow of the foundation show through. A tiny compact, the right size for a mini-purse yet fitted with mirror and puff, is $3.50. A larger box of loose powder is $5.

Eyes Will Sparkle With This Aid

I kept to my old mascara but succumbed to the new eye-shadow. This comes in a powder form and stays on remarkably well. Like many people—but strangely enough not all—I found that cream eyeshadows soaked into my skin and disappeared. I had to renew them after a while. This powder sits on my skin beautifully. It comes in a compressed compact with a tiny brush to apply it. The other end of the brush is a foam pad that is used to blend the different shades of eye-shadow for a really professional look. A compact of this eye-shadow with a mirror is $5.

Last of all, I turned to the problem of lip-stick. Here I balked just a little. After I had found the shade that went best with my new, natural look, the salesgirl suggested a slicker. These are the clear lip-glosses that my daughters have been using for the past year. They wear them alone or over their regular shade. I was amazed to discover that these come in shades from blue to lemon yellow! What, I thought, could the girls be about putting these on their lips? The answer is that they are only slightly tinted, but staid Penny still turned them down. A refillable tube of these slickers is $3, with a refill costing $1.50. A regular tube is $1.35.

If you would like to know where I shopped for my new cosmetics, please call me at 382-3131.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Valenti Answers Dirty Film Critic

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A while back someone wrote to you complaining because motion pictures were getting dirtier and dirtier. And you replied, "Now that Mr. Jack Valenti is president of the Motion Picture Association, we can all sleep a little better."

I don't know about you, Abby, but I haven't been sleeping any better since Mr. Valenti took over. Could Mr. Valenti be the one who is sleeping? So far I haven't noticed any improvement. If anything, I think movies are dirtier than ever. Why doesn't your Mr. Valenti do something?

I don't expect to see this in print. You'll probably just toss it into the wastebasket, but I had to write anyway. Sincerely.

"SOLD OUT"

DEAR SOLD OUT: I didn't toss your letter into the wastebasket. Instead I tossed it into an envelope and sent it to Mr. Valenti. His reply:

"Dear SOLD OUT: I wish I had all the power you credit me with. If I did, I would change things a mite. When it comes to passing judgment on a film, even the experts can't agree on what is "dirty." What the motion picture code attempts to do in this democratic society—where there is no censorship—is to inform the public honestly about the content of the film, then let parents make the judgements. That is the only democratic way. The alternative is despotism, where a small group decides for all.

If parents cannot control and guide their children, are we to deliver that responsibility to the state? And remember, Sold Out, the state is people, "and thus a handful of mortals will be gathering unto themselves one enormous amount of power." Then who would watch the watchers? And who would guard the guardians? Sincerely, Jack Valenti."

DEAR ABBY: My daughter is in a home for unwed mothers now. She has decided to give her baby up for adoption. I won't go into the reasons for her decision, but I think she's doing the right thing. She's only 15. She doesn't even want to see the baby. She says it will be easier to forget if she doesn't.

Abby, even though it would be a lie, what harm would there be if I were to tell her that her baby died? I am not asking her doctor to tell the lie—I will take all the responsibility myself. I just want the doctor and the people at the home where she will deliver the baby to back me up on my story.

My daughter has suffered enough already, and I only want to make it easier for her by telling her that her baby died. She won't have to go through life wondering where her child is. I can see only good in this lie, but if you think I'm wrong, please tell me why, and I'll do as you say. Thank you.

HER MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Your motives are "good"—but one cannot accomplish good with evil acts. I advise you to forget this scheme. It is morally wrong.

DEAR ABBY: I have a five-year-old daughter I'll call Sally. My neighbor has a five-year-old daughter I'll call Patty. Well, we took our daughters to the doctor for their shots.

First my neighbor took Patty in, and she screamed and hollered like the doctor was cutting her arm off, so Patty's mother said, 'I won't let that mean old doctor hurt you. If you stop crying I will buy you a new doll on the way home." So Patty turned off the tears like you would turn off a faucet.

When it was my daughter's turn for her shot I took her in and she started yelling and carrying on just like Patty did. I said, "Wait a minute, Doctor." Then I took Sally and tore up her little bottom. Then I said, "You let the doctor give you the shot so you won't get sick and die, and I don't want to see any more scenes." After that she behaved herself and didn't shed a tear.

When we got home, Sally said, "Mamma, don't you love me?" And I said, "Sure I do, with all my heart." And then she said, "How come you didn't get me a doll like Patty?"

Abby, should I have gotten my little girl a doll, too?

MIXED-UP MOTHER.

DEAR MOTHER: No. If you had, you would have taught her two things: (1) If she wants something, all she has to do is scream for it. (2) A child is entitled to something just because a friend has one.

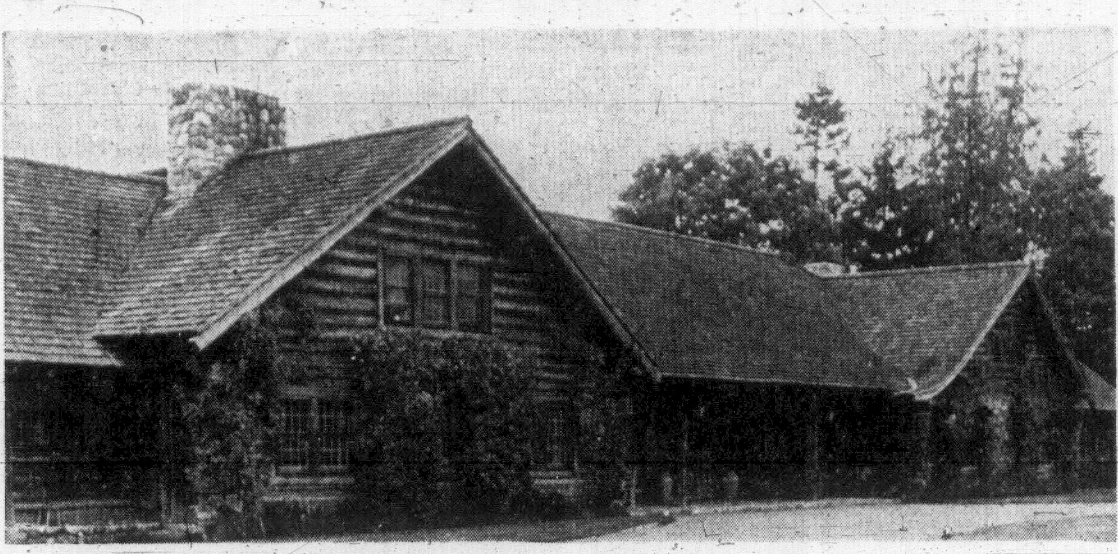
Qualicum Beach Resort of Eaglecrest Retains its Glory

MANOR IN THE GRAND MANNER

By PAT DUFOUR



Overlooking the Gulf of Georgia, the rustic Qualicum resort of Eaglecrest remains unchanged since the depression years when it was built as a hunting lodge for the late General A. D. McRae.

It would be easy to become accustomed to living like a queen. I tried it this weekend. It was much to my taste.

The chance came when Miss Mina Ross, manager of Eaglecrest, the Qualicum Beach resort where Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip spent a three-day holiday in 1951, arranged a press party to circulate the fact that the lodge was now open all year round.

We arrived Saturday, just in time for the cocktail hour, after driving down the rugged road which winds through fields where Jersey cows and other livestock graze on the 200-acre estate. At the entrance gate there still stood the log-built milkhouse which was furbished with specially built signs for the royal visit.

The lodge and other buildings on the estate are built of cedar logs from trees in the Horne Lake district. The exteriors are mellowed with age. Inside the log walls gleam with linseed oil care.

KING-SIZE KINDLING

The four fireplaces in the main lodge are large enough to bed a tall man. When we arrived, the one in the main lounge welcomed us with baronial-size kindling.

The late General A. D. McRae had built the estate as a country home in the depression years. He leaves no doubt of his ancestry. Tartans add richness to most of the rooms, especially the study and adjoining bedroom which my husband and I were given for overnight quarters.

Leonard Boultbee, who owns the resort, was on hand to greet us and assure us that little has changed since the days when the general and his family lived there.

Over the hearth mantel in the main lounge hangs a Chilcotin chief's saffron ceremonial robe; the house bell bears the date 1883 and is stamped with the crest of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railroad.

Carved old French habitant pieces add their own warmth in the suite which Queen Elizabeth occupied. I'd like to have slept in a Queen's bed but must admit that the one allotted to me had its own attraction.

EYES LOOK DOWN

There is a complete selection of British Columbia's fur-bearing animals in the main lodge. It seemed to me that the general had mounted most of them around the four-poster bed which became my nocturnal quarters. They had such an alive look about them, I had a few doubts about taking my eyes off them long enough to dive under the bed covers! As if to soothe my doubts, I found a hot-water bottle had been thoughtfully placed there by the housekeeper.

Mr. Boultbee's assertion that the lodge still housed the trappings of the McRae era was borne out in the exercising vibrator machine that stood at the side of my bed. The general must have been determined to keep his waistline because it had a strap wide and long enough to please a giant!

Mrs. McRae must surely have been the epitome of industrious housewives. Carefully kept, there's a magnificent collection of needle-point rugs, counterpanes and hangings.

SKIRL OF PIPES

In keeping with my fleeting glimpse of royal grandeur, a piper in the uniform of a Southern Highlander skirled his salute before we sat down to dinner.

What a meal that was! With cream, vegetables and meat from the estate, it gave a clue to the general's need for exercising. We sat at a long refectory table, dominated at both ends with huge pewter candlesticks which had once had their place in an Italian monastery.

The wine list was as impressive as the cuisine. Perhaps it helped stimulate the conversation that kept our party moving until a late hour.

EARLY START

With such a full day behind her, Mina Ross still insisted that she'd rise to see us off when we left Sunday morning at 6:30. The unorthodox hour was necessary. We had an 11-mile sailing race scheduled at Sidney that morning.

We protested . . . she persisted. No surreptitious departure is allowed at Eaglecrest.

As a matter of fact, when Miss Ross rose, the cook also decided to join the departure committee. She made breakfast and a lunch to munch on during the race.

Hours later, as we ate the sandwiches made with home-made bread, we both were thankful for our short glimpse of grandeur. Must admit, though, a hearty wind gave us enough exercise to make the general's machine redundant.

A New You

by Emily Wilkens

"A perfect beauty is a bore," said Pablo, one of the world's most respected authorities on the art of making women look beautiful. "But uneven, irregular features are endearing. The greatest beauties have wonderful imperfections which are distinguishing trademarks."

All of which echoes my own sentiments.

Currently the Beauty Director for Elizabeth Arden, Pablo's innovations and unusual approaches to makeup have influenced the appearance of women throughout the world. He feels that the eyes are the most expressive aspect of personal beauty and therefore he has specialized in exciting departures in eye makeup, running the gamut from the use of flowers and petals to jewels and "animal" effects (zebra, for example). His "fantasy eyes" earned him the

"Many of my designs for magazines and newspapers are, of course, very frivolous, and not meant for women to copy," Pablo admitted. "They are intended to create excitement about the possibilities of spotlighting the glamor of the eye."

It was Pablo who first introduced the use of double sets of false lashes on the upper lid replete with a single pair on the lower lid. But, despite his involvement with the artifices, he is very adamant and realistic in his suggestions for making the most of individual beauty.

"Makeup doesn't make the girl," he says. "It's only an accessory to a total look, much like the right purse or shoes.

"Young girls often make the mistake of applying excessive makeup which distorts their natural beauty instead of enhancing it. Further, no girl, no matter how lovely her figure, how good her bone structure, or how fantastic her wardrobe, can be really beautiful if her skin is bad. Don't depend on makeup to hide neglect."

Feeling as I do about a sensible approach to loveliness, it was truly a treat to find such a kindred spirit.

To Pablo, the real symbol of beauty is what shines through the eyes.

"Women talk with their eyes," he said, "that's why I concentrate on this feature, and play everything else down to emphasize the eyes. I don't like to see them bordered by brows in a harsh way. Sometimes, instead of acting as a frame, the eyebrows become a jail."

To create the desired effect he suggests lightening the brows so they aren't too heavy and "cleaning" them out underneath the arch in order to give "air space" around the eyes.

Here's what he had to say about frequently made makeup mistakes:

"In some cases the foundation is too heavy and doesn't match the color of the neck.

"Often, using too much powder tends to emphasize lines, especially around the eyes.

"The use of cosmetics can't be an either or proposition," he observed. "A woman without a bit of makeup is too unsophisticated for today's eye. Makeup should never be overpowering, either. Brushed-on beauty should be as delicate as the pollen on a butterfly's wings.

"Never," said this creator of beauty, "confuse painted-on beauty with inner beauty. No amount of makeup can ever make a mean soul look more kindly."

Mothers Take New Course In Preparation for Jobs

By JEAN SHARP
Canadian Press Women's Editor

TORONTO (CP) — Twenty-five women over 30 are spending $70 and a morning a week for 15 weeks to find out whether they want to work, where they might find jobs, and how they would go about resuming an interrupted education or career.

Between them they have 51 children, assorted working experience and a lot of doubts. Their husbands' attitudes toward their course range from encouraging through skeptical to discouraging.

The course, designed by Sylvia Campbell, offers personal counselling, a series of lectures on today's social and economic climate, especially as it affects women, and another series in career areas such as civil service, teaching, business. It started Feb. 14.

Mrs. Campbell is student adviser at Atkinson College, York University. The course is sponsored by York's centre for continuting education.

OUT OF TOUCH

All women taking the course have passed Grade 12 and almost half are 45 to 49 years old, with children 12 to 19. Most say they are seeking self-confidence as well as practical guidelines.

Mrs. Bruce Johnson says: "When you are thinking about babies and recipes, you lose touch."

All have agreed that if they are to get more education, they should have condensed, intensified courses. Many would like to find part-time jobs, at least as a start.

Mrs. James Carnegie has been married 13 years and has a wealth of volunteer experience, but none at a paid job. She was offered an opportunity to teach handicapped children and accepted eagerly.

"I lasted three months," she said. "It was a humiliating experience. I was exhausted. I found I couldn't cope and keep the house the way I had wanted to."

Mrs. Carnegie says she feels she must organize her life differently to have both job and family. She would not try to sew as much, entertain as much or serve the kind of meals she served when she was home all the time.

Mrs. Kenneth Cameron says she was trained as an occupational therapist, but never worked at it. She thinks she would do something else now if she got a job.

"I haven't any monetary reason for working," she says. "But I've watched so many people whose children are grown, and I don't like what they're doing with their lives."

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Lowman

Beverly Sills of the New York City Opera, has been the biggest news on the international music scene ever since her appearance last season as Cleopatra in Handel's "Julius Caesar" revealed her as a new coloratura soprano star of the first magnitude.

This was an aspect of her voice that previous roles in her already well established career had only hinted at. It was a little like someone discovering that a painting, long in the family, is in reality an old master.

The coloratura is the rarest voice in the soprano range. It is also the most perishable, and because of this, one might think that the question of growing older might engage Beverly's concern. The opposite is true.

"Growing older," says Miss Sills, "is an unavoidable as death and taxes, so I don't give it much attention. However, you don't have to seem or look any older than necessary. Keeping a youthful outlook and whatever good looks you've been blessed with makes sense for everyone, not just performers.

"Today, most women know what the good habits in grooming, eating, sleeping and exercise are, and they look much younger than their parents or grandparents did. But, I am often astonished when I meet a young woman or man who, nevertheless, gives the impression of being much older than his or her looks. Boredom can do this! It's as though someone had reached in and turned off a light somewhere inside them."

Well, if Miss Sills has any problems, certainly boredom is not one of them! She is always busy filling engagements and learning new roles.

She wants to explore and make her own all the important roles in the coloratura repertoire. She enjoys the excitement of new challenges and the exhilaration of accomplishing them.

She says, "I do think if performers generally seem young, it is because they are always in the process of preparing for an appearance, making it, and then with luck being applauded for it, and this makes them young. They are like students in school learning new and fascinating lessons that give them a chance to shine and be admired."

All of us have the capacity for some kind of creativity no matter in what area we operate. There is the housewife who becomes involved in "Headstart" or some philanthropic activity, the young girl or woman who makes her own clothes, the secretary who is willing to take on more and more responsibility, the teacher who takes an after-school course, the person who paints, makes jewelry or sings in a chorus in spare time. All of these and many more activities widen horizons, add zest to life, and can actually keep us younger.

For more ideas about how to stay young and happy all through life, send for my free leaflet, "Individual Happiness." To obtain your copy, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope and your request for it to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

BLUFF CALLED?

Pat Paulsen, the comedian who had little success mastering the waves of Victoria's Inner Harbor when he tried to walk on the waters in an earlier visit but went on to dominate television waves in the Smothers Brothers Show, was in town again Sunday. He and his wife, Janie, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. "Gipp" Forster of Sidney. They visited Oak Bay Marina, dined at the Century Inn and admitted that Paulsen's presidential aspirations had begun as a joke. "But," said Paulsen, "I'm moved by Lyndon Johnson's dropping out of the race. I'd run against Nixon, but not Kennedy." Gipp Forster confides that Paulsen acted as a man whose bluff has been called. He might even run . . . for office, that is.

9 IN MEMORIAM

LANDY—In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother Emily (Gertie) Landy, who departed from us on April 1, 1967.

Peacefully sleeping, resting at last,
The world's weary trouble and patience she bore,

Till God called her home to suffer no more.

BRIDGE LESSON

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Oswald: "No, we haven't. Maybe we should remedy that lack right now."

Jim: "Here's a good example. The six no-trump contract is eminently sound since in his hand and dummy's South has four spades, two hearts, three diamonds and three clubs in top cards. A rubber bridge player wouldn't worry much about an overtrick because he would be satisfied with scoring 190 below the line plus 500 for the rubber and 750 for the slam, but he might just as well go after the overtrick as a matter of technique."

Opening lead—♥ Q

Oswald: "The basic play for the overtrick is to see if clubs break. If each opponent holds three clubs, South's fourth club becomes the 13th trick. If not, there must be some squeeze possibility since either dummy's fourth diamond or South's own third heart becomes a potential squeeze card."

Jim: "That is the base of all squeezes. You can't make all the ricks without exerting pressure. You exert the pressure and the squeeze operates."

Oswald: "This hand is set up as a simple one-way squeeze against East. South wins the heart opening and runs off four spade tricks. He throws a small heart from dummy. West lets a heart go also, as does East. Then South leads a second heart to his hand and East is squeezed. He has to throw away a club or a diamond and either discard gives South his 13th trick."

Jim: "This hand represents a three-suit squeeze situation. Take West's four of hearts and trade it for East's five of diamonds. Now the four spade leads and two heart leads won't bother East because he could only stop clubs anyway. West won't be bothered up to that point, but South will squeeze West when he leads out dummy's three top clubs. West will be forced to throw a diamond or his last heart. Either discard will give South the 13th trick."

FOR THE SEEKER OF CHARM

This 3-year-old in a quiet, low tax area, is positively a delight to show! Basically a 2-bedroom home, with extra rooms in the full basement area, it has the mark of loving care and thoughtful planning. The landscaping alone, with a plastic awninged patio, shrubs, green lawns and baby fruit trees would demand your interest, but the inside appointments and decor will make this "your home" at sight!

Just $22,900

Canada Gets Papers Of Bertrand Russell

HAMILTON, Ont. (CP) —The private papers, archives and library of Bertrand Russell, world famous British philosopher, will soon be housed at McMaster University, it was announced here Saturday.

Dr. H. G. Thode, president of the university, said the Russell archive is "the first major collection of its kind ever to come to this country."

The papers and files, reportedly purchased for $480,000, will be housed in the McMaster University Libraries' Atkinson Archival Centre.

The purchase, believed to be a world record price for any collection of works, was made possible by a grant of $255,000 from the Atkinson Charitable Foundation and an undisclosed sum from the Canada Council and other private donors.

INCLUDES DRAFTS

The collection includes original drafts of Russell's Principia Mathematica with the comments of A. M. Whitehead written in the margin.

Although the collection will be housed at McMaster, it will be available to scholars from all over the world.

Russell, now 95, decided some months ago to sell the archives to finance the attempt of his Special Vietnam Committee to indict the United States government for "war crimes" in Vietnam. The money will go to the Bertrand Russell Peace Foundation.

The purchase was reported to have been completed at Lord Russell's home in North Wales by William Ready, McMaster librarian and professor of bibliography. McMaster won the collection against bidding from many universities and museums in the United States.

The collection is to be shipped to Canada later this year.

Centenarian Flummoxed By Beauties

A man forced to find a second career in Victoria at the age of 70 celebrated his 101st birthday Sunday in the Glenwarren Private Hospital.

Robert Smithson thought Victoria an inhospitable place when the depression made it necessary for him to lease his farm and take a job selling door-to-door.

But he made a successful career and many friends here before he retired.

COULDN'T CHOOSE

A spry and cheerful person, Mr. Smithson remained a bachelor "because there were so many beautiful ladies around, I just couldn't choose one."

Mr. Smithson's great-grandfather emigrated from Yorkshire in 1815, settling in Monaghan Township in Northumberland County, Ontario, where he built a durable stone house that stands to this day.

Mr. Smithson's parents moved to Saskatchewan in the early homestead days, settling a half section 105 miles from Scott in the western part of the province.

DRIVEN OUT

He homesteaded and farmed himself until the depression and the droughts of the 30s drove him away from the prairies to his second career in Victoria.

Last year on his 100th birthday, the hall of the Willoughby Guest Home, where he lived then, was filled with flowers from well-wishers. A birthday cake, a letter from the premier of Saskatchewan and a cablegram from the Queen added to the excitement of the day.

This year, however, it was a quieter celebration.

ONCE PART OF EARTH?

Landing on Moon May Solve Mystery

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Man now knows more about parts of the moon's surface than he does about many places on his own earth and American astronauts soon will learn even more about his celestial next-door neighbor.

When they plant their boots in the dusty lunar soil, hopefully next year, they will be in a bleak, barren wasteland that is both lifeless and airless, baked by day and frozen by night in temperatures that range from 250 degrees above to 250 degrees below zero Fahrenheit.

There is no atmosphere, no wind, storms, clouds or water.

During the last four years, 14 unmanned American spacecraft have either hit the moon, orbited it or soft-landed on it.

Eight Soviet mooncraft also have been successful. But American experts report they have provided only negligible information in comparison with the more sophisticated U.S. machines. The American vehicles have sent back more than 102,000 pictures, while the Soviet craft have produced only 150, mostly crude.

The American goal is to land two men on the surface in this decade. If the Apollo program continues at its present forward pace, they'll be there by the summer of 1969.

CAMERAS MAPPED MOON

It was the Surveyor and Lunar Orbiter series that produced the most dramatic evidence of conditions on the moon. As a result, scientists now have a clear, complete map of both the front and the back side, which is not visible from earth.

Navy Capt. Lee R. Scherer, director of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Apollo lunar exploration office, said the Orbiter flights "have shown us that the radiation and micro-meteoroid hazard in the vicinity of the moon is nothing that we need worry about."

He said the study of the photos will occupy lunar scientists for many years.

"We know that we see things like rolling boulders," Scherer said. "So we know there's some sort of activity on the moon. We know without question that there's volcanic activity on the moon. We see features that look very much like dry river beds on earth. So there's been some sort of flow on the moon."

The moon has no magnetic field, radiation belts or ionosphere. There is nothing to stop the radiation-bearing solar wind from constantly brushing the lunar surface on the side facing the sun.

FIND EARTH-LIKE ROCK

The surface in the smooth plains is nearly identical to the basaltic rock scattered over a great portion of the earth. Surveyor VII landed in the rugged highlands, north of the crater Tucho, where it detected the same kind of granite rock that is found in many mountains on earth, including the Rockies.

Eugene Shoemaker of the U.S. Geological Survey and others cautioned against abandoning any of the current theories on lunar origin, until man has visited the moon and brought back samples. But Shoemaker said, from a personal view, the date may strengthen the theory that the moon at one time was part of the earth and it split away millions of years ago and became an earth satellite.

It is generally believed our solar system was formed between 4,300,000,000 and 4,700,000,000 years ago, possibly by a great gas cloud spinning out from the sun or from the collision of two massive stars.

On earth, the atmosphere and oceans wear away surface features in 10,000,000 to 50,000,000 years. Mountain-building activity turns over large areas on the surface in about the same time.

But not on the moon, which has retained a record probably dating back to the infancy of the solar system.

Man now has the tools—the rockets and space ships—to pursue this scientific goal. He will not just visit the moon; he will explore it.

Much of the scientific planning for the early moon missions is being done by the science and applications directorate of NASA's Manned Spacecraft Centre in Houston, Tex.

Dr. Wilmot N. Hess, head of the directorate, said the most important goal of the first flight will be to bring home samples of the lunar soil.

For a year or more after the visitors leave, several planted measuring devices will radio information on such things as moonquakes, magnetic fields, radiation and temperatures.

After the initial landing, the space agency plans two manned lunar expeditions a year for at least three years.

Scientists want to land astronauts at as many geologically-different sites as possible to obtain maximum information.

To determine whether life ever existed on the moon, it is hoped astronauts can visit permanently shaded areas near the polar regions. Here, micro-organism fossils of microbial forms might have been protected through the centuries from the heat and radiation of the sun, perhaps frozen in ice balls.

Although all lunar scientists do not agree, Hess said that under the present moon exploration program, "if we obtain the three classes of information — celestial, mechanical, geophysical — then we can calculate the origin of the moon to a high degree of accuracy."

CYC VOLUNTEERS PROTEST

Ottawa Will Reconsider 'Phasing Out' Decision

New Stability Shown Among Volunteers in B.C.

The Company of Young Canadians' Yellow Point conference pointed to a new stability for CYC in British Columbia, a company official says.

Geoff Cue of Vancouver told The Times the conference showed "we are going to do something about what we can do something about."

He said at this time little can be done now about the organization's future status under a new Prime Minister or current administrative problems in Ottawa.

"But we can help our own projects."

He said the B.C. projects must increase inter-communication and the Yellow Point conference started this.

"If this doesn't happen in this region, we're dead, because our projects are fragmented and isolated."

"But with a good exchange developing between the projects, they will go on regardless of what happens to the company, and maybe the idea will go on."

By PAUL WILLIAMSON

Earlier this year, the Company of Young Canadians Ottawa office classified two of the organization's B.C. projects "isolated."

This in effect killed the projects, because the company Thirteen volunteers in B.C. out" isolated projects. had earlier decided to "phase- immediately fired off a strong telegram to executive director Alan Clarke calling the decision "not acceptable to any project in this area."

"We told them decisions about projects, without prior consultation of the volunteers involved, were simply unacceptable."

Ottawa decided to reconsider and a new decision is expected April 1. In the meantime, all the projects are going ahead.

The incident underlines the ironic conflict resulting from a tendency for CYC to grow into one of the things it was originally conceived to combat—an impersonal bureaucracy.

Although the working relationship between the volunteers and the communities in which they work has achieved a high degree of effectiveness, communication between Ottawa and the far-flung projects appears less successful.

Late last year it was decided to abandon the company's regional structure and create a "projected-oriented" company.

The company was originally organized into five regions: B.C., prairies, Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes. Each had its own regional director.

In the new system the regions are out. The Ottawa office of the company now deals directly with the projects.

Much of the criticism of the company structure originated with staff people in the regional offices. The elimination of these positions has naturally brought charges of muzzling.

Mr. Cue doesn't feel this strongly about the change, but he has misgivings.

"One problem is dealing with the communities we live in. If you are dealing with a government or agency official, he wants to know who is boss.

"You've got to have some structure to relate to the community environment."

For most of the volunteers, the issue is not the type of structure, but whether the structure permits the volunteer to have the support of the company but the freedom to work.

If the company is to work, say volunteers, it is the people in the field who must make the decisions.

Peter Murdoch, 21-year-old CYC trainee working for six weeks in the Victoria area, put it this way.

"If the decision to phase out certain projects is an indication of Ottawa's touch with the field, the situation calls for immediate change.

"The company has a greater potential for life than to sustain such arbitrary decisions."

mer activities in the worst way, said Mr. Dalgleish and the division has held three meetings with student representatives to get their ideas.

While the summer program for adults leans heavily on winter night course subjects a novel new one will be a class for bus drivers.

Field trips such as shoreline explorations are being considered for the young adults as well as bus tours, one they indicated they wanted.

ANY IDEAS?

The adult education division would like to hear from people with course ideas or who might serve as instructors, said Mr. Dalgleish.

Some students have indicated they would like to be able to write off one of their school subjects during the summer, opening more room in their curriculum during the school year.

As part of the program the division will take over the administration of the Bastion Theatre summer school, freeing its staff for more time with young people.

Former navy public relations officer Jack Kempster has been hired to operate the summer program.

Mr. Dalgeish indicated future summer programs will be flexible to meet changing demands. He predicted rapid growth as the public discovers the variety they will offer.

Big Increase In Saanich Construction

Municipal figures show the value of all permits in the first three months was $5.38 million compared with $2.92 million in the same period last year.

Of this, $2.67 million was for 138 single-family houses and duplexes compared with $1.64 million for 92 homes in the first three months of last year.

March building figures were boosted by the $810,000, 135-suite apartment at Richmond and Cedar Hill. Nearly all the rest—$951,500—was for 48 houses and duplexes.

Abduction Trial Set for April 17

Trial of a man charged with abducting his four children was set in central court today for April 17.

Dr. Glen Stewart is charged with defying a court order awarding custody of the children to his estranged wife.

Bail was set Saturday at $5,000.

Non-Payment Worries Steve

TORONTO (CP) — The owner of Toronto City, last year in the United Soccer Association, says he may take legal action to keep Toronto Falcons of the North American League from playing here this season.

Steve Stavro said that when the United Association and the National Professional Soccer League merged he "agreed to bow out of Toronto when the merged leagues agreed to pay me $160,000."

"The first payment of $50,000 was supposed to be on my desk Jan. 1, the second Jan. 1, 1969, and three $20,000 payments from 1970 through 1972. So far, I haven't received a cent."

Stavro said he has territorial rights within 100 miles of Toronto. Falcons are scheduled to open their home season here May 12 against New York Generals.

Let Nature Also Help

By HILDA BEASTALL

The gardener can do much for his environment simply by not doing anything.

This paradox occurred to me recently when in a garden whose owner had made maximum use of natural features.

Hilda

In other words, he had accomplished much on his new property by leaving the rocks and arbutus, the camass and dogwood, and a small group of Garry oaks.

Where these plants occur on a property, there is every chance of their thriving for many years, and natural increase by seed is probable.

This will ensure continuity of fine native trees which occur nowhere else in Canada. The Saanich Peninsula and Victoria area form the northern boundary for Arbutus menziesi, dogwood (Cornus nuttali) and the Garry oak (Quercus garreana).

Specimens of these trees are seen fruther north on Vancouver Island and also on the mainland, but those are likely to be either cultivated trees or chance seedlings transported by other artificial means.

The native erythronium (locally known as Easter-lily), now in bloom, makes a charming underplanting for these trees, and is closely followed by the splendid native blue camass.

Why this lovely plant is rooted out from new properties is something I have yet to understand.

Ten years ago I managed to salvage two dozen of the bulbs from a heap to be burned. They had been dug from an area beneath birch trees where in previous years I had revelled in the scene in April—the delicate greening of white-trunked birches as a canopy for dark blue camass spikes three feet in height. The whole area was being levelled for a lawn.

Nature is prolific and needs restraint and guidance, but why must we try to wipe out these our most charming natives?

What Causes a Stomach Ulcer?

By DR. WALTER C. ALVAREZ

People by the score keep asking me why they got a stomach or duodenal (just below the stomach) ulcer. Others ask if they should be operated on, and many others write to ask why they are worse off after the ulcer operation than before. As I have said many times, practically always, when I see a person with an ulcer, and I can get him to talk freely to me, I learn that when his ulcer came, something distressing happned to him either in his home or in his office.

Alvarez

Back in 1912, I had as a patient and friend a fine man, an assistant professor, who had invented an important bit of machinery. Money started to pour in, and he was delighted. But then a defect appeared in his invention, and the company that was using it said, "Come and get it; we are throwing it out."

With this the poor inventor got such a violent ulcer that he went to bed with it. Soon he corrected the defect in his machine, and again all was well. Six times in the next two years part of the invention failed, and six times my patient went to bed with a bad ulcer.

I could tell many stories like that. One day I went into a store where a young, sensitive man was working, and I saw there a new manager, who obviously was a very unpleasant person. Within a month my young friend, because of the strain of working under his nasty boss, had an ulcer. Later, when the boss got fired, my friend lost his ulcer.

This is why I rarely permit an ulcer patient of mine to have an operation for ulcer. Not only is the operation often not necessary, but the results of removal of most of the stomach, together with its nerves, can be disastrous.

Here on my desk is a letter just received from a woman who says that since her operation she has been a nervous wreck, unable to eat much, and unable to work. She has a "dumping stomach" —due to her food's suddenly going from her mouth into her bowel; and because the nerves were cut, she has a miserable diarrhea.

According to a number of statisticians, about a fourth of the patients who are operated on for an ulcer are either no better or are worse. What pleases me is today a number of the ablest surgeons tell me that they will operate for ulcer only when a person has a complication such as perforation of the ulcer, marked bleeding, obstruction at the outlet of the stomach, or intractable pain. Recently, as I visited surgical friends in a great clinic, they told me that they no longer are operating on ulcers, unless complications force them to do this. Dr. Karl Meyer, the dean of Chicago surgeons, has told me the same thing.

Regional Bonds Can Be Sold, Says Minister

He made the comment in answering a number of questions posed during discussion of his departmental estimates approved by the house.

The provincial government already guarantees school and hospital borrowings, Mr. Campbell said.

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a World Book Atlas.

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Gary Folley, age 9, of High Point, North Carolina, for his question:

What is a ribbon seal?

If you were an Eskimo of the frozen north, you would need a comfortable outfit of warm and weather-proof clothing. You would choose pelts of seal or walrus, wolverine or polar bear. If you wanted something with added attraction, you might go hunting for a ribbon seal.

The place to hunt for the ribbon seal is where North America blends with the cold northern Arctic. You may find him in the Bering Sea or around the foggy Aleutian Islands or off the rocky isles along the shores of Alaska. And when you find him you cannot mistake him for any other animal in the world. No, the ribbon seal is not bedecked with rows and bows of dainty ribbons. But his coat is marked with bonds that look for all the world like eye-catching bands of ribbon.

His basic color is chocolate brown. His ribbons are the color of bright yellow marigolds. The contrast of his color scheme is outstanding. But the neat, well-designed arrangement of his ribbons is even more outstanding. He wears one of them around his neck as a necklace. Two others are bracelets, one around each front flipper where the arm joins his chubby body. And naturally the well dressed fellow wears a belt. This last ribbon is worn below his fat tummy, just above his tail fin. All his bright yellow ribbons are of the same smooth width.

The ribbon seal is a sort of distant cousin to the sea lion of the circus. His close relatives are the family of earless seals that have no outside ears. His stiff, hairy coat is very different from the furry seals. He also is more fitted for life in the water. The back flippers of a hair seal are ideal for swimming, but they are attached to his body in such a way that he cannot use them at all for getting about on land, and he is as clumsy as a fish out of water.

Swift Swimmers

The circus sea lion and his eared seal relatives wear dark fur coats and sun themselves on dark, rocky shores. The ribbon seal and his hairy kinfolk tend to wear more snappy colors — with spots or circles, bands or blotches of eye-catching color. One wears a stiff beard and several can puff up their noses or cheeks like balloons. The giant of the clan is the 18-foot elephant seal who may weigh more than two tons. His huge nose is an inflatable, elephant-type trunk.

The pelts of the hair seals are not as warm and furry as those of the eared seals. But Eskimos, like everyone else, enjoy adding a bit of color to their outfits. The hooded seal wears bright spots and the ringed seal is dotted with white circles; the leopard seal is blotched with black and the harp seal wears a dark saddle. All their pelts make attractive belts and boots. But the most handsome Eskimo accessories are made from the ribbon seal.

On land, the clumsy hair seals are at the mercy of hungry polar bears. In the water, they can, as a rule outswim the shark and the greedy grampus. They must sufrace to breathe, but they solved this problem ages ago. They can stay below 20 minutes or more. Hair seals even sleep in the water and float up for a breath of air without even waking. Most of them come on land only once each year to bear their young.

Andy sends a World Book Atlas to Ivan Naylor, age 9, of Elkview, West Virginia, for his question:

What exactly is the Hall of Fame?

The Hall of Fame for outstanding Americans was started in 1900—68 years ago. It was planned to honor men and women who have added to the long-lasting greatness of the United States. You may visit the building at New York University in New York City. You will find the bronze busts of those who belong there in a graceful outdoor corridor. The roof stands on stately granite pillars and the half-circle of marble corridor has no walls. The statues stand in niches between the pillars, each with a name and dates to tell when the person lived.

This good idea deserved to be copied. Medical science has two Halls of Fame to honor great surgeons and scientists. Bowling and boxing, tennis and football each have a Hall of Fame to honor famous players. Perhaps the most famous in the world of sports is the Baseball Hall of Fame. We now have halls of fame to honor famous Indians and senators, merchants and cowboys and many others.

'Stupid Feuding' Ended By Quebec Separatists?

MONTREAL (CP) — The Rassemblement pour l'Independence Nationale Sunday decided to "end the stupid feuding between independentists" and voted unanimously to form a common front with the sovereignty movement of Rene Levesque.

The RIN, at a weekend convention in suburban Jacques Cartier attended by 600 delegates, passed a resolution calling for the common front "while waiting for the result of negotiations" with Mr. Levesque's Mouvement Souverainete-Association—Association Sovereignty Movement—which proposes an independent Quebec with loose economic ties with Canada.

Pierre Bourgault, re-elected president of the RIN by acclamation, said the alignment with the MSA would allow the two groups to work together for Quebec independence and adopt joint decisions on various problems.

Although the resolution on a common front with Mr. Levesque's movement, and the election of Mr. Bourgault were approved quickly, the delegates got embroiled in a lively debate over the possibility of joining forces with the province's other main separatist party, le Ralliement national.

PROPOSAL REJECTED

An amendment to the main linking resolution with the MSA was put forward but opposed by Mr. Bourgault and the majority of delegates. Mr. Bourgault rejected the idea of asking the RN, led by fiery Gilles Gregoire, to join "for reasons of efficiency."

The RIN and the MSA, he said, are the two main forces for Quebec independence while the RN plays only a secondary role.

Orders Bombing Pause in N. Vietnam

Challenges Ho To Negotiate

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson has ordered a halt in U.S. bombing of most of North Vietnam in a sudden new bid to de-escalate the war in Southeast Asia and get peace talks started in the immediate future.

"I call upon President Ho Chi Minh, Johnson said in announcing his action Sunday night, "to respond positively, and favorably, to this new step toward peace."

He did not say how long the limited cessation of attacks would continue if Ho does not respond favorably. He did say the bombing halt, covering "almost 90 per cent" of North Vietnam's population, could be made complete if Ho now would demonstrate "restraint."

The president did not link his new peace offensive with his bombshell announcement removing himself from the presidential election race. But there was immediate Washington speculation that Ho might do so.

INTEREST IN DOUBT

The question was whether Ho—if he is interested in negotiations at all—would expect to get better peace terms from a new administration than from the outgoing president.

The president called on Britain and the Soviet Union "to do all they can to move . . . toward genuine peace in Southeast Asia." Officials said those two governments—co-chairmen of the Geneva Conferences of 1954 and 1962—could play key roles in arranging talks. They were notified shortly in advance of Johnson's announcement, and the South Vietnamese government was consulted, officials indicated.

Johnson made clear that air strikes would continue against Communist forces building up in the southern area of North Vietnam against Khe Sanh and other U.S. and allied positions in the northern border region of South Vietnam.

But he said these strikes also "could come to an early end" if North Vietnam would impose "restraint" on its operations.

The president put his proposal this way:

"Tonight, I have ordered our aircraft and our naval vessels to make no attacks on North Vietnam, except in the area north of the demilitarized zone where the continuing enemy build-up directly threatens allied forward positions and where movements of troops and supplies are clearly related to that threat."

NAMES GO-BETWEENS

Johnson then named Ambassador-at-large W. Averell Harriman to represent him, with the assistance of the U.S. ambassador in Moscow, Llewellyn Thompson, in any talks that can be arranged at Geneva, Switzerland, "or any other suitable place."

Johnson based his partial bombing halt and his peace bid announced in a speech at San Antonio, Tex., last September.

HANOI'S DEMANDS IGNORED

MOSCOW (Reuters) — The Soviet news agency Tass today accused President Johnson of once again ignoring Hanoi's demand by announcing only a partial halt to bombing raids over North Vietnam.

In the first reaction to Johnson's announcement Sunday night that raids would be stopped over 90 per cent of North Vietnamese territory, Tass's Washington correspondent repeated that North Vietnam's demand was for a "complete and unconditional halt to the bombing and all acts of war against the Vietnamese people."

Britain 'In Touch' With Soviet

LONDON (UPI) — Britain announced today it is consulting with the Soviet Union on possible new Vietnam peace moves in the wake of President Johnson's speech.

Britain and the Soviet Union are co-chairmen of the Geneva conference which ended the French Indochina war in 1954 and would have to act jointly to reconvene it.

British Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart announced in parliament the British government has been "in touch" with the Russians over possible new initiatives following Johnson's de-escalation of the war.

Stewart said he summoned Soviet Ambassador Mikhail Smirnovski for further talks later today on what Britain and Russia could do about the president's call to help towards peace in Southeast Asia.

PUNTA ARENAS, Chile (Reuters)—Lone British yachtsman Alec Rose passed this treacherous cape at the tip of South America today to add his name to the list of famous Cape Horners.

JUST NORTH OF DMZ

Red Storage Areas, Truck Convoys Hit

SAIGON (AP)—American bombers and warships halted their attacks on most of North Vietnam today, one day after strikes close to Hanoi, Haiphong and the Chinese border.

The pause in the bombing ordered by President Johnson was the 10th curtailment in the air war against the North since it began Feb. 7, 1965.

The U.S. command said American fighter-bombers confined their attacks on North Vietnam today to an area just above the demilitarized zone, hitting enemy storage complexes, truck convoys and gun positions.

Johnson said bombing would continue "in the area north of the demilitarized zone where the continuing enemy buildup directly threatens Allied forward positions and where movements of troops and supplies are clearly related to that threat."

Most of the air strikes in this area have been against truck convoys believed headed southward with war materials for the 40,000 North Vietnamese troops who are believed menacing U.S. marines at Khe Sanh, Con Thien, Gio Linh, Dong Ha and other southern allied posts just below the DMZ.

It was learned that U.S. planes also will continue reconnaissance and aerial photographic missions all over North Vietnam.

The president made no reference to the bombing of the Ho Chi Minh Trail through Laos, over which thousands of tons of war material and thousands of troops move into South Vietnam. Presumably, this air campaign will continue.

As expected ranking U.S. military and embassy officials refused to comment on the presi-

HEAVY ATTACKS ON SAIGON DEPOT

SAIGON (UPI) — Communist forces launched heavy attacks today on a sprawling petroleum tank farm on Saigon's southern outskirts in their second consecutive early morning raid. The attack came after a bombing pause of North Vietnam went into effect.

U.S. officials said two huge petroleum tanks were set ablaze and a third was in danger of igniting at Nha Be, about three miles south of the city. Nha Be is the main fuel storage area for Saigon and surrounding provinces and is the site of a major port facility.

The spokesman said two outposts at the tank farm came under heavy fire. Similar attacks were made before dawn Sunday when the Communists also rocketed Long Binh, the headquarters complex for U.S. army forces in Vietnam.

HANOI VETO HINTED

TOKYO (Reuters) — North Vietnamese sources in Peking branded President Johnson's new peace overture as "out of the question" as a basis to end the Vietnam war, the Peking correspondent of the Japanese Kyodo news agency reported.

The correspondent quoted the sources as saying U.S. troops would continue military aggression in Vietnam.

The sources were reported to have described their view as "informal" but added that it is the concerted feeling of the "Vietnamese people."

Johnson's statement is "out of the question for the Vietnamese people," the report said.

PM Sees UN Role In Vietnam

OTTAWA (CP) — The U.S. decision to stop bombing North Vietnam puts it "strictly up to the Communist side to reciprocate and show their desire to end the war by negotiation rather than force," Prime Minister Pearson said today.

Mr. Pearson also said the decision announced Sunday night by U.S. President Johnson opens the way for serious consideration of the possibility of United Nations intervention in Vietnam.

"This is a time for urgent action on every front by all governments who are concerned with ending the war and beginning the negotiation of peace."

In his first public comment since President Johnson's Sunday night announcement that almost all U.S. bombing and shelling of North Vietnam had been called off, Mr. Pearson said in a statement he hopes the Communist side will respond quickly to the U.S. action.

"We must hope that, in this new situation, the friends of Hanoi, and most of all the U.S.S.R., will urge the North Vietnam government to react to the U.S. initiative so that the slaughter and destruction of this tragic conflict can be brought to an end."

PRAISES JOHNSON

Mr. Pearson said it would not be fitting for him to comment on Mr. Johnson's decision not to seek another term as president.

"His decision was made, I am sure, out of regard for the public interest as he saw it, as one would expect from one who has devoted his life to the service of his people; a service which in recent years has been given under a burden of pressures and responsibilities heavier than those borne by any other person in the world."

Stresses Need To Unite U.S.

By ARCH McKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP)—President Lyndon Johnson told the U.S. Sunday night he won't seek re-election. He called his decision "completely irrevocable."

He coupled that with an emotional warning against national "divisiveness and all its ugly consequences" and an announcement of an immediate unconditional halt to air and sea attacks against most of North Vietnam as a "first step" toward ending the Southeast Asian war.

In another speech today the president pleaded for reason and responsibility to prevail "among all the frenzy and emotion" of an election year.

The president announced, however, the sending of another 24,500 troops to Vietnam—making a maximum of 500,000 there. He has already sent 11,000 and 13,500 will be sent during the next five months.

His decision announced Sunday night to hand over to a successor, to be chosen in the Nov. 5 general election, rocked the already-turbulent political scene.

Will He Try to Pick Successor?

Also up in the air were the plans of Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey, who might join Senators Robert F. Kennedy of New York and Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota in the 1968 Democratic sweepstakes.

No president eligible to succeed himself has spurned a fight for the office since Harry S Truman bowed out in 1952 during the controversial Korean War.

Johnson attributed his decision—which aides said was a year in the making—to controversies rending the country at this time, including the Vietnam war.

Johnson voiced his emotion-packed pronouncement in a television-radio address. Then he met with reporters in the White House and sought to dispel any suspicion that he might change his mind or succumb to a draft.

To do this, he used the phrase "completely irrevocable."

Aside from the war in Asia, whose conduct he defended strongly, recent events pointed to racial discord of record intensity this year.

Johnson also called once again for the U.S. Congress to approve a tax increase, reflecting the economic malaise influencing international speculation that the U.S. dollar eventually may be de-valued.

Polls Showed Loss of Popularity

Latest public opinion polls showed Johnson's popularlity—generally and on his handling of the war—at a record low.

As the president noted Sunday night in his speech lasting 40 minutes, he had served 52 months and 10 days since succeeding the assassinated John F. Kennedy. He will leave office next Jan. 1.

"There is divisiveness in America's house now," Johnson declared in a postscript to the text of the speech handed out before delivery, "Guard against divisiveness and all its ugly consequences."

Then the Texan added:

"With our hopes and the world's hopes for peace . . . in the balance every day, I do not believe that I should devote an hour or a day of my time to any personal partisan call or to any duties other than the duties of this office, the presidency of your country.

"Accordingly, I shall not seek and I will not accept the nomination of my party for another term as your president."

The latest Gallup poll showed Johnson's public-approval rating as president at a record low of 36 per cent compared with 38 per cent last October. Another by Louis Harris showed Robert Kennedy doing better than the president against Richard Nixon, the Republican candidate.

Wall St. Sets Volume Record

NEW YORK (UPI)—Sales set an all-time record on the New York Stock Exchange today in response to President Johnson's decision to retire and to slow down the Vietnam bombing.

(See page 8.)

Volume soared beyond the 16,410,000 mark that was reached on the Black Tuesday of the Wall Street crash, Oct. 29, 1929. The milestone was passed at 3:15 p.m. (EST).

Almost all groups of stocks advanced during the hectic day of trading which saw investors jamming brokerage offices and hovering around ticker machines which at times ran 15 minutes behind.

HE'S SPENDING WHERE IT COUNTS

Men, Money, Myth All With Kennedy

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Robert F. Kennedy of New York emerged as the leading contender for the Democratic presidential nomination after President Johnson's announcement that he will not seek renomination.

The mathematics of politics ordinarily would assure Senator Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota top place among the contenders for the vacated prize.

But in the emotional year of 1968, the men, the money and the myth of Camelot are all on Kennedy's side.

McCarthy will get a satisfying boost by winning Wisconsin's presidential primary Tuesday after the president's default. But once the balloting is over, some Wisconsin leaders of the Johnson and McCarthy organizations may swing quickly to Kennedy.

The Minnesota senator is spending all that comes in on winning primaries while Kennedy's unlimited financial resources are pointed at the selection of delegates at state conventions, where the nomination is won or lost.

Few states have election laws that make it mandatory for delegates to support the candidate who wins a primary it's the national convention that picks the candidate, and that's where friendly delegations count.

Johnson's announcement that he is "substantially reducing" the current level of hostilities in Vietnam on a unilateral basis is exactly what both McCarthy and Kennedy have called for.

Yet in reversing the hard line he has taken, Johnson stuck to the proviso that the bombing lull must be matched by "restraing in Hanoi" if there are to be peace negotiations.

DISSENTERS SHAKEN

Even in their wildest dreams, however, dissenters did not expect Johnson to say: "I shall not seek—and will not accept—the nomination of my party for another term as your president!"

This was not in context with the ideas of almost every political pro. These knowledgable ones thought Johnson would never give up, never obliterate his ambition to become the president who had served longest next to Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The reaction of Richard M. Nixon, the leading candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, that Johnson "may have strengthened his hand in the party and made it possible for him to name his successorr" was not shared generally by political leaders.

In their estimation, Johnson's declaration transferred him immediately from a powerful White House force into a lame duck president, one who is going out of office.

The explanation of White House Press Secretary George Christian that Johnson had in his pocket a statement of a similar won't-run announcement when he delivered his State-of-the-Union address in January, but did not use it, surprised most Democrats.

Senator Kennedy said today that, despite President Johnson's decision he does not think the Democratic party now is united behind him.

TEXT OF JOHNSON'S SPEECH

WASHINGTON (AP) — The text of President Johnson's broadcast talk on the Vietnam war:

Tonight I want to speak to you on peace in Vietnam and South Asia.

No other question so preoccupies our people. No other dream so absorbs the 250 million human beings who live in that part of the world. No other goal motivates American policy in Southeast Asia.

For years, representatives of our government and others have traveled the word—seeking to find a basis for peace talks.

Since last September, they have carried theoffer Imade public at San Antonio.

It was this:

That the United States would stop its bombardment of North Vietnam when that would lead promptly to productive discussions—and that we would assume that North Vietnam would not take military advantage of our restraint.

Hanoi denounced this offer, both privately and publicly. Even while the search for peace was going on, North Vietnam rushed their preparations for a savage assault on the people, the government, and the allies of South Vietnam.

'Attack Failed'

Their attack—during the Tet holidays—failed to achieve its principal objectives.

It did not collapse the elected government of South Vietnam or shatter its army—as the Communists had hoped.

It did not produce a "general uprising" among the people of the cities. The Communists were unable to maintain control of any city. And they took very heavy casualties.

But they did compel the South Vietnamese and their allies to move certain forces from the countryside, into the cities.

They cause widespread disruption and suffering. Their attacks, and the battles that followed, made refugees of half a million human beings.

The Communists may renew their attack. They are, it appears, trying to make 1968 the year of decision in South Vietnam—the year that brings, if not final victory or defeat, at least a turning point in the struggle.

This much is clear:

If they do mount another round of heavy attacks, they will not succeed in destroying the fighting power of South Vietnam and its allies.

But tragically, this is also clear: many men—on both sides of the struggle—will be lost. A nation that has already suffered 20 years of warfare will suffer once again. Armies on both sides will take new casualties. And the war will go on.

There is no need for this to be so.

No Need to Delay

There is no need to delay the talks that could bring an end to this long and bloody war.

Tonight, I renew the offer I made last August—to stop the bombardment of North Vietnam. We ask that talks begin promptly, and that they be serious talks on the substance of peace. We assume that during those talks Hanoi would not take advantage of our restraint.

We are prepared to move immediately toward peace through negotiations.

Tonight, in the hope that this action will lead to early talks, I am taking the first step to de-escalate the conflict. We are reducing—substantially reducing—the present level of hostilities.

And we are doing so unilaterally, and at once.

Tonight, I have ordered our aircraft and naval vessels to make no attacks on North Vietnam, except in the area north of the demilitarized zone (DMZ) where the continuing enemy build-up directly threatens allied forward positions and where movements of troops and supplies are clearly related to that threat.

The area in which we are stopping our attacks includes almost 90 per cent of North Vietnam's population, and most of its territory. Thus there will be no attacks around the principal populated areas, and in the food-producing areas of North Vietnam.

Even this limited bombing of the north could come to an early end—if our restraint is matched by restraint in Hanoi. But I cannot in conscience stop all bombing so long as to do so would immediately and directly endanger the lives of our men and our allies. Whether a complete bombing halt becomes possible in the future will be determined by events.

wour purpose in this action is to bring about a reduction in the level of violence that now exists.

Save Lives

It is to save the lives of brave men—and of innocent women and children. It is to permit the contending forces to move closer to a political settlement. Tonight, I call upon the United Kingdom and the Soviet Union—as co-chairmen of the Geneva Conferences, and as permanent members of the United Nations Security Council—to do all they can to move from the unilateral act of de-escalation I have just announced toward genuine peace in Southeast Asia.

Now, as in the past, the United States is ready to send its representatives to any forum, at any time, to discuss a means of bringing this war to an end.

I am designating one of our most distinguished Americans, Ambassador Averell Harriman, as my personal representative for such talks. In addition, I have asked Ambassador Llewellyn Thompson, who returned from Moscow for consultations, to be available to join Ambassador Harriman at Geneva or any other suitable place just as soon as Hanoi agrees to a conference.

I call upon President Ho Chi favorably to this new step toward peace.

But if peace does not come now through negotiations, it will come when Hanoi understands that our common resolve is unshakeable and our common strength is invincible.

Tonight, we and other allied nations are contributing 600,000 fighting men to assist 700,000 South Vietnamese troops in defending their country.

Our presence there has always rested on this basic belief: the main burden of preserving their freedommu st be carried by the South Vietnamese themselves.

We and our allies can only help to provide a shield—behind which the people of South Vietnam can survive and develop. On their efforts—on their determination and resourcefulness—the outcome will ultimately depend.

Suffered Terribly

That small, beleaguered nation has suffered terrible punishment for more than 20 years.

I pay tribute once again to the great courage and endurance of its people. South Vietnam supports armed forces of almost 700,000 men today—the equivalent of more than 10 million in our own population. Its people maintain their firm determination to be free of domination by the north.

There has been substantial progress in building a durable government during the past three years. The South Vietnam of 1965 could not have survived the enemy's Tet offensive of 1968. The elected government of South Vietnam survived that attack—and is rapidly repairing the devastation it wrought.

The South Vietnamese know that further efforts are required:

—to expand their armed forces,

—to move back into the countryside,

—to increase their taxes,

—to select the very best men theyhave for civil and military responsibility,

—to achieve a new unity within their constitutional government,

—and to include ir. the national effortal l those groups who wish to preserve South Vietnam's control over its own destiny.

Last week President Thieu ordered the mobilization of135,000 additional South Vietnamese. He plans to reach—as soon as possible—a total military strength of some 800,000 men.

To achieve this, the Government of South Vietnam started the drafting of 19-year-olds on March 1st. On May 1st, the Government will begin drafting 18-year-olds.

Last month, 10,000 men volunteered for military service—two and a half times the number of volunteers during the same month last year. Since the middle of January, more than 48,000 South Vietnamese have joined the armed forces—nearly half of them volunteers.

All men in the South Vietnamese armed forces have had their tours of service extended for the duration of the war, and reserves are now being called for active duty.

President Thieu told his people last week:

"We must make greater efforts and accept more sacrifices because, as I have said many times, this is our country. The existence of our nation is at stake, and this is mainly a Vietnamese responsibility."

He warned his people that a majorn ational effort is required to root out corruption and incompetence at all levels of government.

We applaud this evidence of renewed determination on the part of South Vietnam. Our first priority will be to support their effort.

More Equipment

We shall accelerate the re-equipment of South Vietnam's armed forces—to meet the enemy's increased firepower. This will enable them progressively to undertake a larger share of combat operations against the Communists.

On many occasions I haby air an emergency basis. Artillery, tank, aircraft, medical and other units needed to work with and support these infantry troops in combat did not accompany them.

In order that these forces may reach maximum combat effectiveness, we should prepared to sent—during the next five months—support troops totalling approximately 13,500 men.

A portion of these men will be made available from our active forces. The balance will come from Reserve component units which will be called up for service.

Actions we have taken since the beginning of the year

—to re-equip the South Vietnamese forces,

—to meet our responsibilities in Korea, as well as in Vietnam,

—to meet price increases and the cost of activating and deploying reserve forces,

—to replace helicopters and provide the otherm ilitary supplies we need, will require additional expenditures.

The estimate of those additional expenditures is 2.5 billion dollars in this fiscal year, and 2.6 billion in the next fiscal year.

As Hanoi considers its course, it should be in no doubt of our intentions. It must not miscalculate the pressures within our democracy in this election year.

We have no intention of widening this war.

But the United States will not accept a fake solution to this long and arduous struggle and call it peace.

No one can foretell the precise terms of an eventual settlement.

Our objective in South Vietnam has never been the annihilation of the enemy. It has been to bring about a recognition in Hanoi that its objective—taking over the South by force—could not be achieved.

Peace can be based on the Geneva Accords of 1954—under political conditions that permit the South Vietnamese—all the South Vietnamese—to chart their course free of any outside domination or interference.

Tonight I also reaffirm the pledge we made at Manila—that we are prepared to withdraw our forces from South Vietnam as the other side withdraws its forces to the North, stops infiltration, and the level of violence thus subsides.

'Done All We Could'

Our goal of peace and self-determination in Vietnam is directly related to the future of Southeast Asia—where much has happened to inspire confidence during the past 10 years. We have done all that we could to contribute to that confidence.

A number of its nations have shown what can be accomplished under conditions of security. Since 1966 Indonesia, the fifth largest nation in the world, has had a government dedicated to peace with its neighbors and improved conditions for its own people. Political and economic cooperation between nations has grown rapidly.

Every American can take pride in the role we have played in Southeast Asia. We can rightly judge—as responsible Southeast Asians themselves do—that the progress of the past three years would have been far less likely—if not impossible—if America and others had not made the stand in Vietnam.

At Johns Hopkins University, three years ag o, I announced that we would take part in the great work of developing Southeast Asia, including the Mekong Valley—for all the people of the region. Our determination to help build a better land—for men on both sides of the present conflict—has not diminished. Indeed, the ravages of war have made it more urgent than ever.

I repeat tonight what I said at Johns Hopkins—that North Vietnam could take its place in this common effort just as soon as peaceco mes.

Over time, a wider framework of peace and security in Southeast Asia may become possible. The new cooperation of the nations of the area could be a foundation-stone. Certainly friendship with the nations of such a Southeast Asia.

People Want Peace

It will come because the people of Southeast Asia want it—those whose armies are at war today, and those who, though threatened, have thus far been spared.

Peace will come because Asians were willing to work for it—to sacrifice for it—to diefor it.

But let it never be forgotten: peace will come also because America sent her sons to help secure it.

It has not been easy—far from it. During the past four and a half years, it has been my fate and responsibility to be commander-in-chief. I have lived—daily—with the cost of this war. I know the pain it has inflicted and the misgivings it has aroused.

Throughout this period, I have been sustained by a single principle:

—that what we are doing now, inVi etnam, is vital not only to the security of Asia, but to our own security.

Surely we have treaties which we must respect, and commitments we must keep. Resolutions of Congress testify tothe need to resist aggression in Southeast Asia.

But the heart of our involvement in South Vietnamhas always been America's security.

And the larger purpose of our involvement has always been to help the nations of Southeast Asia becomeind ependent, self-sustaining members of the world community.

With such an Asia, our country—and the world—will be far more secure than itis tonight.

I believe that a peaceful Asia is far nearer to reality, because of what America has done in Vietnam. I believe that the men who endure the dangers of battle there are helping the entire world avoid far greater conflicts than this one.

The peace that will bring them home will come. Tonight I have offered the first in what I hope will be a series of mutual moves toward peace.

I pray that it will not be rejected by the leaders of North Vietnam. I pray that they will accept it as a means by which the sacrifices of theirown people may be ended.

Words of JFK

Finally, my fellow Americans, let me say this. Of those to whom much is given, much is asked. I cannot say—no man could say—that no more will be asked of us. Yet I believe that now—no less than when the decade began—this generation of Americans is willing to:

Pay any price, bear any burden, meet any hardship, support any friend, oppose any foe, to assure the survival and the success of liberty.

Since those words were spoken by John F. Kennedy the people of American have kept that compact with mankind's noblest cause. We shall continue to keep it.

Yet I believe we must always be mindful of this one thing:

wwhatever the trials and tests ahead, the ultimate strength of our country and our cause will lie not in powerful weapons or infinite resources or boundless wealth—but in the unity of our people.

A Free Man

This I believe very deeply.

Throughout my public career, I have followed the personal philosophy that I am a free man, an American, a public servant, and a member of my party—in that order, a lways and only. For 37 years in the service of our nation—as congressman, as senator, as vice president, and as your president—I have put the unity of the people first, ahead of any divisive partisanship.

In these times, as in times before, it is true that a house divided against itself—by the spirit of faction, of party, of region, of religion, of race—is a house that cannot stand.

There is a division in the American ho use n ow. Holding the trust that is mine—as president of all the people—I cannot disregard the peril to the progress of the American people and the hope and prospects of peace for all peoples. I would ask all Americans—whatever their personal interest or concerns—to guard against divisiveness and all its consequences.

Commitment Kept

Fifty-two months and 10 days ago, in a moment of tragedy and trauman, the duties of this office fell upon me. I asked then for "your help and God's" htat we might contisue America on its course, binding up our wounds, healing our history, moving forward in new unity to clear the American agenda and to keep the American commitment for all our people.

United, we have kept that commitment—and enlarged it.

Through all time to come, America will be a stronger nation, a more just society, a land of greater opportunity and fulfimment because of what we have done together in these years of unparalleled achievement.

Our reward will come in the life of freedom and peace and hope that our children will enjoy through ages ahead.

What we won when all our people united must not now be lost in suspicion, distrust, and selfishness among anyo f our people.

Partisan Divisions

Believing this as I do, I have concluded that I should not permit the presidency to become involved in the partisan divisions that are developing in this political year.

With America's sons in the field far away, with America's future under challenge here at home, with our hopes—and the world's hopes—for peace in the balance every day, I do not believe that I should devote an hour of my time to any personal partisan causes or to any duties other than the awesome duties of this office.

Accordingly, I shall not seek—and will not accept—the nomination of my party for another term as your president. Let men everywhere, however, know that a strong, confident, vigilant America stands ready to seek an honorable peace and to stand ready to defend an honored cause, whatever the price, whatever the burden, whatever the sacrifice that duty may require.

Thank you for listening tonight and may God bless all of you.

From Reuters—AP

SAIGON (CP) — Senior South Vietnamese diplomats reacted with incredulity and dismay today at President Johnson's shock announcement to virtually stop bombing North Vietnam and not to run again for president.

One senior diplomat said the announcement was a turning point of the war that would benefit North Vietnam.

He said such decisions in the past were usually a matter of bilateral discussions. "As far as I know we had no advance warning of this," he said.

Informed observers however believed Johnson's announcement was communicated in advance to South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu.

HOPES FOR CHANGE

One diplomat said he hoped a way could be found to reverse Johnson's decision not to run for the presidency. "We can only look on such a prospect with dismay," he said.

Johnson's cut on air strikes over the North met heavy criticism in Saigon.

South Vietnamese diplomats pointed out that a proposed increase in American troops would be cancelled out by increased North Vietnamese ability to infiltrate men and arms, replenish stocks and conduct training in the Hanoi-Haiphong region.

Comments from U.S. soldiers on the bombing pause ranged from "they'll bury all of us" to "this means we'll go home sooner."

One said: "I don't care who is president so long as we get home."

A senior officer on Gen. William C. Westmoreland's staff, who refused to let his name be used, said few American soldiers cared whether Johnson ran for re-election or not.

Many did react, however. Some thought reporters were pulling an April Fool's joke and one lieutenant-colonel said: "You never want to believe a politician when he makes an announcement like that."

Westmoreland, who is to be relieved in July as commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam, told a questioner: "Yes, I have a comment. It's no comment."

would mean eventual domination of the south.

He warned the North Vietnamese that if the new peace offensive failed, peace "will come when Hanoi understands that our common resolve is unshakeable, and our common strength is invincible."

Although he said the United States has no intention of widening the war, he stated, ". . . the United States will never accept a fake solution to this long and arduous struggle and call it peace."

As for terms of any settlement, Johnson said, "no one can foretell the precise terms . . . We think that peace can be based on the Geneva accords of 1954—under political conditons that permit the South Vietnamese—all the South Vietnamese—to chart their course free of any outside domination of interference from us or from anyone else."

Then, before announcing his noncandidacy, the president said he hoped Hanoi would accept his peace initiative. "I pray that they will accept it as a means by which the sacrifices of their own people may be ended."

vessels in the Gulf of Tonkin off North Vietnam.

In a historic escalation of the war, U.S. planes hit installations in North Vietnam and the administration won a congressional resolution approving in advance future actions to fight communism in Southeast Asia.

Critics have since called it a "blank cheque" for escalation and charged the administration's explanation of the Gulf of Tonkin incident was not entirely factual.

After campaigning that Vietnam was a war for the Vietnamese to fight, Johnson defeated Republican Barry Goldwater by a landslide in 1964.

In addition, Johnson was faced with a problem almost as great—and many thought greater—than the war. Beginning with the Negro rioting in Watts in August, 1965, U.S. cities fell prey to summer violence.

Those who had seen Johnson as a political magician began wondering what happened to his wand and bag of tricks.

There were many Democrats who thought so—including Senator Robert Kennedy.

But no one seemed willing to take on the head of party—until Senator Eugene McCarthy decided to.

Then Lyndon Johnson surprised them all.

He said he would not run again.

KICKING UP HER HEELS at old-time costume ball in Saanichton Agricultural Hall is Mrs. Lilly Turner, wearing a bustle and flowered bonnet from the gay 90s. Mrs. Turner is the widow of farmer Jim Turner, well known as a breeder of Shorthorn cattle, and in earlier days, heavy work horses. Ball was the first of several events organized by North and South Saanich Agricultural Society in honor of its 100th anniversary. (Photos by William John).

An Exhausting Good Time Had by All at Costume Ball

It went on past 3 a.m. and everyone had a roaring time at a costume ball in Saanichton Agricultural Hall Saturday night.

Men and women in the styles of 50, 75 and 100 years ago pranced and pirouetted through the highland schottische, the polka, the minuet and the barn dance to the gay music of The Hometowners.

More than 60 box lunches were auctioned and the males who bid highest took the ladies who prepared them into supper. Just an old prairie custom but it was all part of the fun at the first of several events organized by North and South Saanich Agricultural Society in honor of its 100th birthday.

100 COSTUMES

"We were fairly exhausted by 3 a.m.," said Doug McHattie, who acted as master of ceremonies, costumed as a bartender from the Gay 90s.

There were more than 100 period costumes among the 150 men and women attending.

Top prizes were won by Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Ruthven wearing an original 140-year highland kilt and an original 120-year-old Victorian dress; D. Holloway and Mrs. K. Bloomfield in 75-year-old costumes; C. Creed and Mrs. L. Bissett in the styles of 50 years ago.

Proceeds from the ball will go to the society's amateur rodeo to be held at Saanichton May 24 and the annual Saanichton Fair Aug. 31, Sept. 1 and 2. The oldest fair west of the Great Lakes, it was started in September 1868 and has been held every year since.

BILL 33 HIT

Uvic Students Vote $1,500 To Fight SCs

And they've put their money where their mouth is.

At a Sunday night meeting the student-elected representative assembly gave near-unanimous approval to a motion attacking section 18 of the proposed labor law currently before the legislature.

At the same time it voted $1,500 be set aside to fight Social Credit policies if an election is called this summer.

The section of Bill 33 opposed by the students gives the cabinet power to step in during a labor dispute and order binding arbitration. Severe penalties are provided for those not complying.

'UNDEMOCRATIC'

The student motion said the section "is undemocratic and is in opposition to all rights for which labor has fought over the years."

Those speaking in support said the section would legislate away the principle of the right to strike. Similar measures in Australia had only resulted in more labor-management disputes.

Two members abstained from voting.

The motion on the $1,500 states explicitly it is to be used to defeat policies of the Social Credit government."

Suggested ways and means of doing this included door-to-door campaigning at election time and a program to keep the public informed on student dissatisfaction with government policies and action.

Estimates Higher After 'Slashing'

By JIM HUME

Victoria city council finished its first week of budget-cutting with $20,150 more on the estimated bill than when it started.

A week ago the city's "B" Committee started work on paring the $17,595,805 estimated expenditure figures.

As of this morning the original estimates had grown to $17,615,955.

Council members took a day off today, possibly to re-organize their thinking in order to get down to some serious slashing when talks resume Tuesday morning.

To date only the parks department has felt the knife, and gently at that.

On Friday the parks committee managed to trim $6,225 from the parks budget, enough to reduce the $26,375 increase to a little more than $20,000.

TOUGH TASK

It will be parks again Tuesday morning, this time facing the heavy swing of the axe as parks administrator Herb Warren tries to persuade council to spend $228,150 in extraordinary parks expenditures.

The betting is that he will have little success as council members, alarmed at the prospect of an increase in the mill rate, face the inevitable call for retrenchment.

Next will be public works with a total ordinary budget of $579,995—an increase of $42,820 over last year—and an extraordinary budget of $432,497, an increase of $369,352 over last year.

YEAR'S DELAY

Expected to be delayed for at least one year is street work on Blanshard from Pandora to Pembroke ($102,496); design changes outside the Rose-Blanshard urban renewal scheme ($162,914), and various other lower-cost projects.

The necessity to cut back if the tax rate is to be held within reasonable distance of last year, will also mean that a petition from 56 taxpayers protesting the condition of Bowker Creek will probably be received and filed.

The 56 signatories claim that by failing to completely cover the creek the city has made them victims of discrimination which leaves them to face an acknowledged health hazard.

The petition urges council to finish the enclosure job during the summer months.

City manager Dennis Young admitted this morning the job had not been completed and added it is not likely it will be finished this year.

"It is not regarded as one of our priorities," he said. 'We have enclosed the areas where flooding was a problem and realize that one day we must enclose the entire creek. But as it winds in and out of Saanich and Victoria there isn't much point in us doing our sections unless Saanich also does their section.

"As it is it becomes just a matter of priority and we feel there are more important things to do."

Four City Lawyers Answer Questions At Forum April 24

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

When will the new divorce laws be in effect and what will be the grounds for divorce?

This is one of 32 questions that will be formally answered by four city lawyers at a public forum in McPherson Playhouse Wednesday, April 24, at 8:30 p.m.

During the intermission the audience will be invited to write down any other questions that bother them and these will be answered during the second half of the forum.

FORMS PROVIDED

Forms will be provided for the questions.

The forum will be presented for the third year running by Victoria Bar Association under the auspices of the Victoria Daily Times and CJVI, 900 Radio, and will be broadcast live from the theatre.

Admission will be by ticket only. They are available free to persons completing the coupons appearing in The Times. The coupon, with further details concerning the forum, will be found in an advertisement on Page 20 today.

Coupons may be sent either to The Times or to radio CJVI. At last year's forum all admission tickets were taken.

Moderator will be Judge Montague Drake and the panel of lawyers will be John C. Scott-Harston, QC, Mrs. Constance Isherwood, Kenneth C. Murphy and Dermod D. Owen-Flood.

ORGAN MUSIC

Reg Stone will play organ music from 7:30 p.m. until the start of the forum at 8:30 p.m.

Among the 32 formal questions to be answered are:

Is a contract to buy a house valid if made on a Sunday?

Do I commit any offence if I carry a partly consumed bottle of liquor in my car?

My parents have no assets and no income. Who is responsible for their support?

How can I evict a tenant who refuses to pay his rent and refuses to leave?

How do I qualify to receive the $1,000 Home Acquisition Grant.

Is there any reason I should retain a lawyer when I intend to plead guilty to a driving offence?

Is my landlord allowed to enter my apartment without permission?

What is the procedure for obtaining a court injunction and what is the purpose of an injunction?

Dear Mom and Dad: 'I Goofed Off April Fool's Day'

By DON VIPOND

That's the lesson about 200 students at Oak Bay junior secondary will learn after a stampede from the school this morning.

About one quarter of the pupil population bolted at the end of the first period in what appeared to start as an organized April Fools' stunt, said principal Peter Boldt.

When he spoted the rivers of laughing youngsters pouring from doors and exits he ran outside the building and hollered at the disappearing horde.

"FELT ALONE"

"I really felt very much alone," he said afterwards. The rest of the staff seemed mesmerized by the suddeness of the prank.

Those pupils within sound of Mr. Boldt's shout sheepishly returned.

The rest have been fingered. An immediate roll call produced a list of the missing.

The school has a rule which covers the situation, said the principal. Truants must make up lost time on an hour-for-hour basis.

200 STUDENTS

So about 200 students will be gathering in the school gym soon for dictation.

And this is the letter they'll be writing:

"Dear Mother and Dad,

As an April Fool's joke I ran away from school this morning after the first period. I did this on impulse, following others out the door. Whereas I did not deliberately plan to break school rules, I nonetheless am in control of my faculties and realize that I must make up for lost time on an hour-for-hour basis.

"There is a lesson in all this for me. I have learned how easy it is to follow a mob without thinking, how quickly a situation can get out of hand and result in unfortunate circumstances.

"Please sign this letter so that I may return it to the school.

Stolen $125 Saw Sold for $5 To Store Clerk

A man pleaded guilty in central court today to stealing a $125 power saw and selling it for $5.

Court was told Bennet Sam, 9 Cooper Road, took the saw from a neighbor's home Saturday. He sold it to an employee of a downtown store.

He remanded Sam to April 5 for pre-sentence report.

Ordering the saw returned to the original owner, the magistrate said he would do so "without comment on the subsequent transaction."

New Courses Put Emphasis On Summer Fun

The Greater Victoria school board is launching a package of summer courses to meet a public call for holiday activity opportunities.

The program is for adults, youth and children and is a first for the board's adult education division, said director Jack Dalgleish.

He predicted enrolment might reach 800 this summer with interest mushrooming in years ahead as the program catches on and expands.

Most of the courses will be over three weeks, from July 22 to Aug. 9, with classes on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays. Fees will likely be $12 for adults and $10 for students with organizers hoping the program will break even.

Among courses being planned:

In arts and crafts, intermediate and advanced drawing and painting, pottery, ceramics, clay modelling and sculpture, painting in oils, pastels.

In enrichment courses, public speaking, speed reading, creative writing, typing, language, leadership fundamentals.

In homemaking, classes from elementary dressmaking to tailoring and millinery, including courses for children from 11 to 14.

Classes, some in the form of workshops and seminars, will be held at the Institute of Adult Studies headquarters on the old Lansdowne campus, at Lansdowne junior secondary and possibly at Oak Bay junior secondary.

NO HIPPIES NEED APPLY

By PETE LOUDON

Apparently aimed at hippies who often wear long hair, sandals, beads, headbands and costumes distinctively different than the majority of people, the new instruction has been sent to all municipal welfare offices.

Noting that some welfare offices have been in doubt on the matter, a provincial memo makes these points:

- Any welfare applicant not certified as "unemployable" must be registered with Manpower for work.
- He or she "must be available for employment through the observance of conventional dress and grooming."
- He or she must not have refused available work.
- And the applicant must not be living in a group where it is indicated other resources are available to meet living costs.

'NO CHANGE'

Victoria welfare director Alex Davidson confirmed the order when questioned today. But he said, "This is no change (for Victoria). It's been the policy here for months."

Mr. Davidson said an able welfare applicant must make himself available for employment. And if he dresses in a manner which repels employers, he is by his own choice, not making himself available for work.

He agreed that the new government instruction may have been issued because not all provincial welfare offices were agreed on the suggestion that clothing should be considered.

Does everyone have a basic right to dress as he pleases? Should he be penalized because he chooses by strange dress to emphasize his individuality? The questions were put to Victoria Low Income Group executive secretary Reg Clarkson.

'SOCIETY'S RIGHT'

He thought that if a person's dress was a matter of religious conscience there might be grounds for saying the rule was an infringement of freedoms.

On the other hand "when a guy's dress becomes a charge on society, then society has a right to clamp down."

A man observing his right to dress as he pleases is acceptable until he infringes on the rights of others by depending on them to support him, Mr. Clarkson suggested.

Man's Leg Broken In Car Crash

Two persons are in hospital as a result of cars going out of control early Sunday.

Graham Russell, 3850 Merriman, is in good condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital with a broken leg.

Oak Bay police said Russell's sports car was demolished after it slammed into a car parked on Henderson Road.

HIT POLE

A passenger, Adele Bewley, 82, of Parksville, was treated for shock and released.

A pedestrian is in good condition in hospital with multiple bruises after she was struck by a car at Fort and Pemberton Saturday night.

Police said Mrs. Mildred Stetsko, 46, of 1346 Stanley, was knocked down by a car driven by James Helm, 640 Douglas.

The Spears Sharp in Gorge Races As Sailors Wrestle Flukey Winds

By SHIRLEY HEWETT

The "river" was predictably unpredictable with flukey winds varying from zero to 20 miles per hour.

But 38 skippers in El Toros, Davidsons, and X-Class boats had a ball, including one representative from the Port Angeles Yacht Club and one from Vancouver's Kitsilano Yacht Club.

The scene was Sunday's Gorge races. The morning race went from Craigflower Park to the Inner Harbor. Boats retraced the course in reverse for the afternoon contest.

Predictably, also, the RCNSA Spears family walked off with two of the top three prizes in the El Toro Division.

The Portage Inlet and Gorge Waterways Association trophy was awarded to the over-all winner, with the lowest point total for the two races.

Jill Spear won the conbined trophy. Second was Robin Spear followed by Greg Hemphill third.

Winner of the morning race was Bis Whitby, who made the four-mile journey in an hour. She was followed by her husband Bill. Third place went to Vince Martorino.

Individual winner of the afternoon race was Jill Spear, who was followed by Greg Hemphill. Robin Spear placed third.

Over-all winner in the Davidson division was Ed Cushing. Doctor Henry Thompson placed second, with Ken Kidd third.

Other prizes were awarded to Kathy Kidd, Cy Connorton, and "John-John" Mossnikoff from Kitsilano. Lou Boulanger took a special spinnaking prize. He piloted his X-Class boat mostly under spinnaker.

PORT YOUR HELM, lower the mains'l, abandon ship or stand by to repel boarders—the great Gorge sailing race was pandemonium at this turning point when water currents challenged wind currents and El Toros, sabots and Davidson dinghies began dashing off in all directions in the white water near Gorge Bridge Sunday. It was great fun for spectators and mariners, all of whom survived to report that a little pollution doesn't mean the Gorge isn't still a top fun spot.

GRIT CAMPAIGN TRAIL

Winters Asks Rollback Of Tax Hike

By the Canadian Press

With the election of Canada's new Liberal party leader and prime minister only a few days away, candidates continued to blitz the nation during the last weekend of campaigning.

Prime Minister Lester Pearson's successor will be chosen at the party's three-day Ottawa convention which opens Thursday.

Robert Winters, whose resignation as minister of trade and commerce was accepted Saturday, used his freedom from the cabinet and attacked recent federal tax increases.

In Lindsay, Ont., he said Saturday that failure to operate within a balanced budget forced the federal government to raise taxes and take drastic measures that could have been avoided.

He said his call for a balanced budget in January had been based on the fear that confidence in the Canadian economy was being threatened by continued deficit financing by the government.

HEALTHY RIVALRY

In Trois-Rivieres, Que., Justice Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau said tension and rivalry between federal and provincial governments are inevitable and healthy.

At a news conference, he said: "Confrontations between the two levels of government are not only inevitable, but positively desirable, a useful and necessary element in a healthy federal system..

"They (confrontations) were not invented by Johnson and Trudeau," he added, referring to his difference of opinion with Quebec Premier Daniel Johnson which flared up after the Feb. 5 federal-provincial constitutional conference.

Health Minister Allan MacEachen, speaking in Halifax, advocated establishment of a federal agency or department of Atlantic affairs.

He said that with such an agency, joint action by the four provincial governments and federal aid bodies could be undertaken.

He said if he were chosen prime minister one of his priorities would be the removal of the inequalities between the Atlantic region and the rest of Canada.

Mr. MacEachen gained the support of Alex Campbell Saturday when the P.E.I. premier announced that the health minister "appeals to me as having the most constructive and effective approach to the solution of Atlantic region problems."

External Affairs Minister Paul Martin told a Rimouski, Que., audience that a federal-provincial body should be set up at the ministerial level to establish fiscal policies for the country.

TAKES QUEBEC STAND

He also said Quebec should have a say in foreign policy and in matters of education and culture when Canada deals with French-speaking countries.

In Montreal, Senator Jean-Paul Deschatelets, former public works minister in the cabinet of Prime Minister Pearson, announced his support for Mr. Martin, saying that the minister was "aware of domestic as well as world problems."

Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp said in Sudbury that Canada had just passed through the worst financial storm in memory.

He referred to Canada's increased taxation in relation to the recent devaluation of the British pound, and the attack on the American dollar primarily because of the war in Vietnam.

He said the world was looking at the Canadian dollar and its value in relation to the value of the U.S. dollar.

"We had to take mild measures early," he said, "so we wouldn't have to take drastic actions later."

CBC POLL SHOWS TRUDEAU AHEAD

OTTAWA (CP) — A CBC television poll has given Justice Minister Trudeau a substantial first-ballot lead in the race to pick a new Liberal leader.

Results of the poll were broadcast Sunday night on the public affairs program The Way It Is.

Mr. Trudeau was given 606 delegate votes, less than half the simple majority of 1,239 required for victory.

There were 357 delegates uncommitted, for a delegate total of 2,476.

Commentators emphasized that the results were the delegates' feelings at the moment, and minds could change by the time they cast their ballots at the leadership convention.

It was not clear from the program whether every delegate had been polled. The result was called a "projection."

Mr. Trudeau led in five provinces: Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Quebec and Ontario. He was tied with Mr. Turner in British Columbia, each with 50 votes.

CAPE TOWN ENDING UN ROLE?

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — The pro-government Afrikaans paper Die Beeld quotes political sources in Cape Town as saying South Africa might decide to quit the United Nations before the end of April.

It listed five factors which could lead to this decision:

The new UN moves against South Africa's refusal to release Southwest African terrorists.

The expected clash with South African authorities when the UN council delegates try to enter Southwest Africa.

MANDATE OVER

S. Africa To Defy UN Again

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — UN delegates from 11 countries set out this week for a destination nobody expects them to reach—Winkhoek, Southwest Africa.

The UN Council for Southwest Africa has orders from the General Assembly to go there to try to oust South African authorities and take it over for the United Nations.

South Africa has rejected the assembly's resolution of Oct. 27, 1966, which declared the white-supremacist government's mandate over Southwest Africa terminated.

South African Prime Minister Vorster said last week that his government would not allow the council to enter Southwest Africa.

The council went ahead with its plans anyway, and this weekend sources in a position to know said it would leave on its mission Friday.

S.A. Rebuffs UN Again

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — South Africa was reported on good authority to have turned down Saturday a third demand from the UN security council that it release Africans convicted of terrorism under South African law.

South African Ambassador Matthys I. Botha gave Secretary General U thant a letter on the subject from Foreign Minister Ellgard Muller. Thant was expected to give the council a written report on South Africa's position today.

TRAIN ROBBER Charles Wilson is expected to serve an extra four years in prison for escaping prison in Britain in 1964, a government spokesman said Saturday. Wilson, 37, was recaptured in Quebec in January. He had served one year of a 30-year sentencee when he escaped.

$40,000,000 FOR AFRICA

MONTREAL (CP)—Special envoy Lionel Chevrier said Saturday he has committed the Canadian government to foreign-aid expenditures of $30,000,000 in French-language Africa in the next three years.

Mr. Chevrier, interviewed on his return from an African tour, said the commitment extends to $40,000,000 in five years and represents a doubling of Canadian aid to the former colonies of France in Africa.

NEW COALITION DIFFICULT

By JOHN STEPHENS

BRUSSELS (Reuters) — Belgium today appeared to be one step closer to splitting into a federation of two states after Flemish and Walloon separatists made significant gains in a general election Sunday.

The older parties still retained their dominant positions in Parliament, although leading political figures said the results would make formation of a new government coalition more difficult.

Almost the only issue in the election was future relations between the country's two language groups, the 3,000,000 French-speaking Walloons in the North, and the 5,000,000 Flemish, who speak a language related to Dutch, in the south.

The election was called when the coalition government of Prime Minister Paul Vanden Boeynants collapsed Feb. 7 after eight Flemish-speaking ministers resigned in a dispute about the future of the French-speaking section of 500-year-old Louvain University.

The biggest loser Sunday was Vanden Boeynant's Social Christian (Catholic) party which was expected to lose between eight and 10 of its 77 seats in the 212-seat lower house of Parliament.

FACE DEFECTION

The Social Christians remained the biggest party in the House, but faced the threat of defection from Flemish separatist members.

The gains went to the Flemish nationalist Volksunie, which gained a probable eight seats for a total of 20, and two French nationalist parties, the Democratic Front and the Walloon Rally, which picked up seven new seats for an expected total of 12.

The Socialists—also threatened with a split by federalist elements—lost between three and five of their 64 seats.

The right-wing Liberal party, junior partner of the former government coalition, was believed to have lost between one and three of its 48 seats after campaigning strongly against federalism.

The Catholics and Liberals between them still commanded at least five more than the 112 seats needed for a majority and could theoretically form another coalition government.

But many political leaders believed the Liberals would probably prefer to go into opposition and try to force another election shortly, and another coalition would heighten the possibility of defections by separatist Social Christians.

U.K. Orders Open Courts

LONDON (CP)—Lord Parker, Britain's lord chief justice, today ordered no one is to be sentenced without the circumstances of the crime being revealed in open court.

His direction followed a wave of editorial protest last week over the way a law dealing with the reporting of court evidence prevented publication of details of a murder for which a man was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Egyptians to Vote in May On Constitutional Reform

CAIRO (AP) — President Gamal Abdel Nasser scheduled Saturday a national plebiscite on a program of constitutional reform based on a single national party—the Arab Socialist Union.

He set the plebiscite for May 2.

Nasser said that if the electorate approves his program, as expected, he will immediately start the process of electing delegates to the Socialist Union national congress, which then would write the new permanent constitution for Egypt.

His pledge of the permanent constitution appeared aimed at placating the country's youth who have been agitating on campuses for greater democracy and civic freedom.

Nasser said that after the country's territory has been liberated from its present occupation—a reference to the Israeli occupation of the Sinai Peninsula — Egypt's new constitution would be submitted to the people in a plebiscite for their approval.

If the constitution is adopted, Nasser said, then there would be elections to choose a new National Assembly and an election to choose a president under this constitution.

CYC VOLUNTEERS PROTEST

Ottawa Will Reconsider 'Phasing Out' Decision

New Stability Shown Among Volunteers in B.C.

The Company of Young Canadians' Yellow Point conference pointed to a new stability for CYC in British Columbia, a company official says.

Geoff Cue of Vancouver told The Times the conference showed "we are going to do something about what we can do something about."

He said at this time little can be done now about the organization's future status under a new Prime Minister or current administrative problems in Ottawa.

"But we can help our own projects."

He said the B.C. projects must increase inter-communication and the Yellow Point conference started this.

"If this doesn't happen in this region, we're dead, because our projects are fragmented and isolated."

"But with a good exchange developing between the projects, they will go on regardless of what happens to the company, and maybe the idea will go on."

By PAUL WILLIAMSON

Earlier this year, the Company of Young Canadians Ottawa office classified two of the organization's B.C. projects "isolated."

This in effect killed the projects, because the company had earlier decided to "phase-out" isolated projects.

Thirteen volunteers in B.C. immediately fired off a strong telegram to executive director Alan Clarke calling the decision "not acceptable to any project in this area."

"We told them decisions about projects, without prior consultation of the volunteers involved, were simply unacceptable."

Ottawa decided to reconsider and a new decision is expected April 1. In the meantime, all the projects are going ahead.

The incident underlines the ironic conflict resulting from a tendency for CYC to grow into one of the things it was originally conceived to combat—an impersonal bureaucracy.

Although the working relationship between the volunteers and the communities in which they work has achieved a high degree of effectiveness, communication between Ottawa and the far-flung projects appears less successful.

Late last year it was decided to abandon the company's regional structure and create a "projected-oriented" company.

The company was originally organized into five regions: B.C., prairies, Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes. Each had its own regional director.

In the new system the regions are out. The Ottawa office of the company now deals directly with the projects.

Much of the criticism of the company structure originated with staff people in the regional offices. The elimination of these positions has naturally brought charges of muzzling.

Mr. Cue doesn't feel this strongly about the change, but he has misgivings.

"One problem is dealing with the communities we live in. If you are dealing with a government or agency official, he wants to know who is boss.

"You've got to have some structure to relate to the community environment."

For most of the volunteers, the issue is not the type of structure, but whether the structure permits the volunteer to have the support of the company but the freedom to work.

If the company is to work, say volunteers, it is the people in the field who must make the decisions.

Peter Murdoch, 21-year-old CYC trainee working for six weeks in the Victoria area, put it this way.

"If the decision to phase out certain projects is an indication of Ottawa's touch with the field, the situation calls for immediate change.

"The company has a greater potential for life than to sustain such arbitrary decisions."

mer activities in the worst way, said Mr. Dalgleish and the division has held three meetings with student representatives to get their ideas.

While the summer program for adults leans heavily on winter night course subjects a novel new one will be a class for bus drivers.

Field trips such as shoreline explorations are being considered for the young adults as well as bus tours, one they indicated they wanted.

ANY IDEAS?

The adult education division would like to hear from people with course ideas or who might serve as instructors, said Mr. Dalgleish.

Some students have indicated they would like to be able to write off one of their school subjects during the summer, opening more room in their curriculum during the school year.

As part of the program the division will take over the administration of the Bastion Theatre summer school, freeing its staff for more time with young people.

Former navy public relations officer Jack Kempster has been hired to operate the summer program.

Mr. Dalgleish indicated future summer programs will be flexible to meet changing demands. He predicted rapid growth as the public discovers the variety they will offer.

Big Increase In Saanich Construction

Municipal figures show the value of all permits in the first three months was $5.38 million compared with $2.92 million in the same period last year.

Of this, $2.67 million was for 138 single-family houses and duplexes compared with $1.64 million for 92 homes in the first three months of last year.

March building figures were boosted by the $810,000, 135-suite apartment at Richmond and Cedar Hill. Nearly all the rest—$951,500—was for 48 houses and duplexes.

Abduction Trial Set for April 17

Trial of a man charged with abducting his four children was set in central court today for April 17.

Dr. Glen Stewart is charged with defying a court order awarding custody of the children to his estranged wife.

Bail was set Saturday at $5,000.

Non-Payment Worries Steve

TORONTO (CP) — The owner of Toronto City, last year in the United Soccer Association, says he may take legal action to keep Toronto Falcons of the North American League from playing here this season.

Steve Stavro said that when the United Association and the National Professional Soccer League merged he "agreed to bow out of Toronto when the merged leagues agreed to pay me $160,000."

"The first payment of $50,000 was supposed to be on my desk Jan. 1, the second Jan. 1, 1969, and three $20,000 payments from 1970 through 1972. So far, I haven't received a cent."

Stavro said he has territorial rights within 100 miles of Toronto. Falcons are scheduled to open their home season here May 12 against New York Generals.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP) — Prices in late trading at the Winnipeg Grain Exchange showed little reaction today to President Johnson's announcement that he would de-escalate the Vietnam war and not seek re-election.

Oilseed exports showed some activity. Japan took 800 tons of flaxseed and 1,100 tons of rapeseed. Some buying, from other sources, however, failed to move prices up.

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain and soybean futures prices declined on the board of trade today under general liquidation that sent wheat prices down more than 1½ cents.

There appeared to be a lack of sustained buying activity. Trade was mixed and volume was slightly above the recent pace.

Liquidation was strong at the opening, and wheat prices quickly moved 1 cent lower. In later dealings prices dipped to 1⅝ cents lower but there was a small surge of buying near the close.

Hedge selling on the opening weakened corn prices to a level from which they never recovered.

Oats and rye prices generally fluctuated with corn and wheat and trade was light.

Gold Sale Quiet

LONDON (AP) — London's gold market, the largest in the world, reopened quietly to two-day private dealings today after its 17-day closure to halt last month's panic gold rush.

The Bank of England was supplying no gold in line with the two-tier market agreed on in Washington March 17 to withhold monetary gold from the grasp of speculators and hoarders.

The price in the free market was fixed at this morning's opening at $38 an ounce, a bit less than Friday's price in the Paris and Zurich markets.

Ottawa followed the London action March 15 by asking banks and gold dealers to stop trading until the situation in gold markets was clarified.

$ EXCHANGE

VICTORIA—Purchase of U.S. funds in terms of the Canadian dollar was quoted today at $1.07⅝ for cheques, $1.07¾ for notes and $1.05¾ for silver. Sales were $1.08⅝ for cheques and $1.08⅝ for notes.

NEW YORK (CP) — Canadian dollar was up 1/16 at 92 27/64 in terms of U.S. funds. Pound sterling was up 23/64 at $2.40 9/16.

MONTREAL (CP) — The U.S. dollar in terms of Canadian funds was down 3/32 at $1.08 7/32. Pound sterling up 3/16 at $2.60.

NY Sets Volume Record

Wall Street closed today with a big gain and piled up the greatest volume in history, topping the 39-year record 16,410,000 shares made on the "black Tuesday" of Oct. 18, 1929.

Turnover topped 17,000,000 shares minutes before the close.

Stocks closed at their highs of the day after recovering from some selling around mid-session after a new report via Japanese sources that North Vietnam was cool to President Johnson's peace move.

The Dow Jones average was up 20.69.

Stocks roared ahead at the start in a record-breaking 6,000,000-share first hour as the Street responded to President Johnson's surprise announcement on the bombing pause and his decision not to accept renomination.

The report on North Vietnamese coolness to the peace move accompanied a drastic cut in the best gains, but this was gradually won back. In the half hour prices surged ahead and volume increased.

Blue chips and glamor stocks spurted on a broad front.

AT VANCOUVER trading was heavy and prices up this morning in reaction to President Johnson's decision to de-esclate the Vietnam war.

By 11 a.m. more than 900,000 shares had changed hands. Leading trader was National Nickel, up '13 to $1.60 from its close Friday on 107,600 shares.

Captain International added '37 to $5.62.

In oil action, Central Del Rio climbed '50 to 14.50.

AT TORONTO the stock market snapped out of a months-long slide today as stock prices bounced up in a wave of investor enthusiasm about improving peace prospects in Vietnam.

"This is what we all have been waiting for," one analyst commented on the rally in the wake of President Johnson's announcement he will not seek re-election and that he has ordered a cutback in the bombing of North Vietnam.

Industrials paced the advance as CPR climbed 2¼ to 51¼ R. L. Crain two points to 44½ and Maclaren A 1½ to 14. Simpsons and Velcro jumped 14 each to 33 and 45¾.

AT LONDON developments in the United States and at the Group of 10 meeting in Stockholm resulted in an active stock market today. In irregular industrials the leaders were mostly lower.

International stocks were generally firmer. British funds and gold shares reacted strongly to the Stockholm agreement on special drawing rights, gilt-edged advancing to record gains of over ½ point in places, while gold shares fell sharply with losses as high as 20 skillings.

Hotels Seek Access To Federal Money

Hotel men meeting here today said the federal government should stop discriminating against their industry when it comes to borrowing funds for capital expansion.

Directors of the B.C. Hotels Association and the Hotel Association of Canada in semi-annual meeting at the Empress Hotel, expressed alarm at current tight money conditions.

Chairman James Vernon, of Vancouver, said hotel men want access to Central Mortgage and Housing, National Housing Act and the Industrial Development Bank Act, from which they have been excluded historically.

"We should at least have the opportunity to apply for loans, but so far we've been refused completely," Mr. Vernon said.

POOR RELATION

"The government has been treating us like a poor relation,"

He noted that while there is no specific exclusion of hotels in provisions for financing new construction under these authorities, the practice reveals that "roadblocks have been set up to preclude the industry from obtaining money normally available at reasonable interest rates to other industries.

"There has been a pronounced hesitancy on the part of the usual commercial lenders to loan funds for expansion or improvements on the security of the hotel alone.

"Exorbitant interest rates (10-12 per cent) in addition to substantial discounts (or bonuses) have become normal practice in such financing over only a short term," Mr. Vernon said.

He said it is impossible to predict accurately over the next 10-15 years what new construction there will be, and that the tourist industry—which the government is anxious to encourage—is left vulnerable.

In B.C., he said, tourism is the third industry and fast approaching second place. "We need the accommodation to meet this increase and would welcome support from the provincial government in this request."
